Historical Judgement Jonathan Gorman,2014-11-27 The historical profession is not noted for examining its own methodologies Indeed most historians are averse to historical theory In Historical Judgement Jonathan Gorman s response to this state of affairs is to argue that if we want to characterize a discipline we need to look to persons who successfully occupy the role of being practitioners of that discipline So to model historiography we must do so from the views of historians Gorman begins by showing what it is to model a discipline by using recent philosophy of law and philosophy of science There are different models at work whose rivalry and resolution are to be historically understood With this approach in place he is able to develop the history of historiography and explore the character of historiography as presented by historians He reveals that historians conform to various norms that historians now and in the past have agreed and disagreed about the same set of interrelated matters truth telling moral judgement and the synthesis of facts and it is this internal understanding that we need to recover if we are to arrive at a correct characterization of the discipline of historiography Demonstrating how the practice of historiography requires choices and therefore the exercise of judgement Gorman is able to show that in their making of judgements historians enjoy the immense benefit of hindsight He shows how in reflecting on their own discipline historians have typically failed to attend adequately to the history of historiography neglecting to situate previous historians within their historical contexts or to pay adequate attention to the fact that present historians too are within a context that will change In addition Gorman s approach which emphasizes the power and necessity of choice and which rests on the pragmatic holistic empiricism of Quine shows postmodernism not to be the threat that some historians feel it to be indeed it is shown to be a radical form of empiricism Gorman shows how the historical enterprise may be established in our factual and moral understanding in the light of our choices and commitments to a shared world Historical Judgement is an original and important contribution to the philosophy of history By bringing together the ideas of historians and philosophers Gorman presents a much more practitioner focused examination of the discipline of history one that will hopefully encourage historians to think more about the nature of what they do

J. M. Wedderburn, 2010 Much has been written about the life of Jesus in works that often claim to be historical and to employ historical methods Yet only sometimes are the methods and the presuppositions involved made explicit However it has also been claimed more recently that a decisive change in our view of the nature of historical knowledge and methods has taken place in that the modern has given way to the postmodern After a survey of a number of books on Jesus that have raised the question of how his life should be studied historically Alexander J M Wedderburn starts by looking at such claims asking how new and how valid the insights involved in what claims to be a
