The Unseen Politics of Public Housing Tiffany Gayle Chenault, 2015-08-15 The Department of Housing and Urban Development HUD emphasizes the word community for building economic development citizen participations and revitalization of facilities and services in urban and rural areas Resident Councils are one way to develop and build community among residents of public housing Despite HUD stressing community building in public housing and investing money and policies around it there are some resident councils that are not fulfilling the expectations of HUD This book is my attempt to describe and explain HUD s expectations for the resident council as an active agent for community building and the actual practices of the resident council I argue that policies and regulations of resident councils which exist to support the effectiveness of the resident council in creating and implementing community building self sufficiency and empowerment activities and goals in a public housing community may do more harm than good The Department of Housing and Urban Development invests and spends billions on Public Housing Programs 6 6 billion in 2013 The majority of the 1 2 million people who live in public housing do not live in large urban areas with thousands of people confined to a certain space The majority of public housing units 90% have fewer than 500 units These smaller units and the people that live in them tend to go unnoticed This ethnographic case study focuses on explaining and understanding the factors and constraints that exist between HUD s expectations for the resident council as an active agent for community building and the actual practices of the resident council To explain the disjunction in fact to determine if such disjunctions identified by Rivertown council members are real Using the tenets of Critical Race Theory allows us to understand what forces either real or imagined structural or cultural prevent the resident council from being an effective agent for change in the public housing community
