the 1990s, the industry has been hit hard by a combination of factors. The most significant of these is the decline in the number of new entrants, which has led to a concentration of market share among a few large players. This has resulted in a more competitive environment, with prices falling and margins squeezed. Another major factor is the increasing pressure from governments and regulators to reduce the environmental impact of the industry. This has led to a number of new regulations, including restrictions on the use of certain chemicals and the requirement to use more sustainable materials. Finally, the industry has also been hit by a number of economic challenges, including a decline in demand and a rise in input costs. These factors have all contributed to a difficult environment for the industry, with many companies struggling to remain profitable.
