Rwanda's agrifood system: Structure and drivers of transformation Diao, Xinshen, Ellis, Mia, Mugabo, Serge, Pauw, Karl, Rosenbach, Gracie, Spielman, David J., Thurlow, James, 2023-01-25 This paper assesses the structure of Rwanda s current and evolving agrifood system and its contribution to national development The paper reiterates the point that Rwanda s agrifood system stretches well beyond primary agriculture and creates jobs and income opportunities throughout the economy While off farm components of Rwanda s agrifood system have generally grown more rapidly than primary agriculture in recent years growth varies across value chains of the agrifood system in the studied period The growth diagnostic in this paper reveals that it is domestic markets that have driven the recent growth in Rwanda s AFS other than exports The paper s forward looking analysis assesses potentially differential impacts of value chain development efforts on broad development outcomes The analysis measures the synergies and trade offs of value chain development in the context of an inclusive agricultural transformation Such analysis is conducted using the Rwanda Computable General Equilibrium CGE model an adaption of IFPRI s Rural Investment and Policy Analysis RIAPA model to the Rwandan context The modeling results indicate that value chains differ considerably in their effectiveness in achieving development goals and there are significant trade offs among different development goals from promoting a specific value chain The value chains that make a larger contribution to growth or job creation are not necessarily effective in reducing poverty or improving dietary quality for example value chains for coffee and tea while value chains that play an important role in improving dietary quality may contribute less to job creation such as vegetables or fruits While there is no single value chain that can achieve all development goals effectively it is possible to select a diversified set of value chains that complement each other in achieving different

Export Opportunities and Barriers in African Growth and Opportunity Act-Eligible Countries, Inv. 332-464 , Who Must Die in Rwanda's Genocide? Kyrsten Sinema,2015-09-11 This book provides a juridical sociopolitical history of the evolution of the 1994 Rwandan genocide Over one million citizens were massacred in less than 100 days via a highly organized efficiently executed genocide throughout the tiny country of Rwanda While genocide is not a unique phenomenon in modern times a genocide like Rwanda s is unique Unlike most genocides wherein a government plans and executes mass murder of a targeted portion of its population asking merely that the majority population look the other way or at most provide no harbor to the targeted population ex Germany the Rwandan government relied heavily on the civilian population to not only politically support but actively engage in the acts of genocide committed over the 100 days throughout the spring of 1994 This book seeks to understand why and how the Rwandan genocide occurred It analyzes the colonial roots of modern Rwandan government and the development of the political state of exception created in Rwanda that ultimately allowed the sovereign to dehumanize the minority Tutsi population and execute the most efficient genocide in modern history

Rwanda's Gacaca Courts Paul Christoph Bornkamm, 2012-01-12 Rwanda's Gacaca courts provide an innovative response to the genocide of 1994 Incorporating elements of both African dispute resolution and of Western style criminal courts Gacaca courts are in line with recent trends to revive traditional grassroots mechanisms as a way of addressing a violent past Having been devised as a holistic approach to prosecution and punishment as well as to healing and repairing they also reflect the increasing importance of victim participation in international criminal justice This book critically examines the Gacaca courts achievements as a mechanism of criminal justice and as a tool for healing repairing and reconciling the shattered communities Having prosecuted over one million people suspected of crimes during the 1994 genocide the courts have been both praised for their efficiency and condemned for their lack of due process Drawing upon extensive observations of trial proceedings this book is the first to provide a detailed analysis of the Gacaca legislation and its practical implementation It discusses the Gacaca courts within the framework of transitional and international criminal justice and argues that despite the trend towards local tailor made solutions to the challenges of political transition there is a common set of principles to be respected in addressing the past Evaluating the Gacaca courts against the backdrop of existing or emerging principles such as the duties to investigate and prosecute and the right to the truth the book provides a sophisticated critique of Rwanda's reconciliation policy In doing so it contributes to the development and the clarification of these principles It concludes that Gacaca courts have achieved a great deal in stimulating a basic discourse on the genocide but they have also contributed to assigning collective responsibility and may thus end up deepening the divides within Rwandan society
