Merchants And Mariners Selected Maritime Writings Of David M Williams:

Merchants and Mariners David Malcolm Williams, 2000 This book is a tribute presented to David Malcolm Williams on the occasion of his sixtieth birthday at the Third International Congress of Maritime History in Esbjerg Denmark p xxv

Merchants and Mariners Lars U. Scholl, 2017-10-18 This book presents twelve essays by historian David M Williams in order to pay tribute to his career The essays stretch from 1807 through to the end of the nineteenth century and address both economic and social themes Topics include maritime trade deployment of merchant ships the state regulations concerning shipping shipwrecks and loss of life passenger cargoes slavery cotton timber and coffee trades and the working conditions of seamen over the course of the century The plight of the maritime labourer is at the core of this collection The essays primarily focus on British shipping and firmly places it within an international context The book is introduced by Lars U Scholl followed by two tributes to Williams career one by Peter N Davies the other by Lewis R Fischer Scholl concludes the volume with a thorough bibliography of Williams maritime writings books chapters and articles

Maritime Labour Richard Gorski, 2007 This is a collection of soundings into various aspects of the history of maritime labor from the close of the Middle Ages to the present The spatial emphasis of the essays is north European and Atlantic since they deal with the countries around the North Sea and Baltic with some coverage of North America Indeed from time to time the authors leave the sea behind in order to examine broader issues such as labor markets the regulation and institutions of seafaring and industrial relations on the waterfront But at all points there is a common theme of sea related labor and a common objective of better understanding what have often been perceived as difficult and elusive groups of people

International Merchant Shipping in the Nineteenth and Twentieth Centuries Lewis R. Fischer, Even Lange, 2017-10-18 This book compiles seven essays concerning changes to merchant shipping over the hundred and fifty years between 1850 and 2000 and spanning a range of countries with particular focus on Norway Greece Japan and England The essays are linked by the theme of change from traditional to modern shipping in fluctuating cargo demands from sail to steam wood to iron in improvements in communication technologies in political natures and affiliations in seafaring skillsets in the advent of containerisation and advent of globalisation The overall aim is to construct a solid international context for the merchant shipping industry in the nineteenth and twentieth centuries primarily to aid a major Norwegian deep sea merchant marine project The book contains an introduction that sets out these aims and seven essays by maritime historians which form part of the international contextual whole though all can be approached individually

Oceania under steam Frances Steel, 2017-02-01 The age of steam was the age of Britain's global maritime dominance the age of enormous ocean liners and human mastery over the seas The world seemed to shrink as timetabled shipping mapped out faster more efficient and more reliable transoceanic networks But what did this transport revolution look like at the other end of the line at the edge of empire in the South Pacific Through the historical example of the largest and most important regional maritime enterprise the Union Steam Ship

Company of New Zealand Frances Steel eloquently charts the diverse and often conflicting interests itineraries and experiences of commercial and political elites common seamen and stewardesses and Islander dock workers and passengers Drawing on a variety of sources including shipping company archives imperial conference proceedings diaries newspapers and photographs this book will appeal to cultural historians and geographers of British imperialism scholars of transport and mobility studies and historians of New Zealand and the Pacific

New Directions in Norwegian Maritime History Lewis R. Fischer, Even Lange, 2017-10-18 This book is a wide reaching study of Norwegian maritime history and developments within the discipline It brings together the research efforts of a University of Oslo project aiming to further understand Norwegian shipping history between 1814 and 2014 and the work of a new generation of maritime historians Structured into three sections global integration political issues and success and failure the volume covers a broad range of maritime topics that have influenced both Norwegian economic development and Norwegian cultural identity Through analysis it discovers that in the last few decades Norwegian shipping has been plagued by multiple troubles whilst simultaneously becoming less crucial to the Norwegian economy in favour of offshore petroleum production However it reiterates the historical importance of shipping to the economic development of Norway and asserts that historians have begun to treat it as the centre from which other industries grew

Maritime Transport and Migration Torsten Feys, 2007 This study explores the connection between global maritime and migration networks to better understand the acceleration of the transatlantic migration rate that took place in the latter half of the nineteenth and early twentieth century It brings together the actions of migrants government regulators transatlantic shipping companies and the agents who represented them to determine the motives and opportunities for transatlantic mass migration The study is comprised of an introductory chapter seven essays by maritime scholars and a conclusion The subject is approached from three particular discussion points the rate of development and the accessibility of transport networks for European migrants the competition between shipping companies and the subsequent influence on migration and the integration of labour markets in both Europe and America It concludes by suggesting both maritime and migration historians should merge their respective fields by including the larger frameworks of each discipline to gain further understanding of their disciplines and identifies the role of ports and shipping companies as crucial to any further study of mass migration

New Directions in Mediterranean Maritime History Gelina Harlaftis, Carmel Vassallo, 2017-10-18 This study seeks to correct the underrepresentation of Mediterranean maritime history in academic publications in attempt to understand the multi cultural and multi ethnic environment in which maritime activity takes place by compiling ten essays from maritime historians concerning Spain France Italy Malta Slovenia Greece Turkey and Israel The aim of the collection is to provide an insight into Mediterranean maritime history to those who could not previously access such information due to language barriers or difficulty securing non English publications some of the essays have translated into English specifically for this publication The majority of the essays concern the Early Modern period and the remainder concern the contemporary Navigating African Maritime History Carina E. Ray, Jeremy Rich, 2017-10-18 This book is a collection of essays addressing multiple aspects of African maritime history in attempt to counter the lack of academic research that exists in comparison to other nations and continents and to assert the value of African topics to the global study of maritime history Each essay addresses African maritime history whilst also demonstrating an inextricable link to the global maritime stage The topics discussed include early human migration to Africa early European contact with Africa the role of West African maritime communities in the Atlantic slave trade New World slaveholders and the exploitation of African maritime skillsets the construction of Atlantic world racial discourses the rise and fall of colonial rule and African immigrant communities in Europe These essays cover maritime topics such as seafaring labour navigational technology swimming diving surfing plus political subjects that include colonisation decolonisation immigration and citizenship The book consists of eight essays and an introduction that evaluates the existing research into African maritime history It includes case studies from every major geographical part of the continent bar North Africa and covers the Early Modern period up to the twentieth century The purpose is not to provide a comprehensive chronological history but rather a diverse collection of topics across a range of periods and locations to reflect the wealth of maritime topics in the history of Africa and their global significance It concludes with a call for further research into non European maritime activity to deepen the global historiography

Maritime History as Global History Maria Fusaro, Amélia Polónia, 2017-10-18 This study aims to provide new insights into the connections between maritime history and global history It demonstrates the significance of maritime activity as a conduit of global exchange by examining local national and international interdependencies and trade networks and a broad range of time periods geographical areas and various sub divisions of maritime historical research It is composed of ten essays with an introductory chapter and concluding chapter The first five essays discuss the effects globalisation on shipping in the early modern period the following three discuss maritime transportation and the economics of industrialisation from the nineteenth century to the present day the next discusses the impact of global entrepreneurialism on maritime history the penultimate discusses the connections and variables between maritime and global history and the concluding chapter examines the theoretical assumptions surrounding the two disciplines using the globalisation of Early Modern Spain as a case study to do so The study demonstrates that the core strength of maritime history is its essential place in global history and that the process of globalisation began at sea
