

Centers for Disease Control and Prevention: The US Public Health Service agencies provide guidance and set national goals for improving health and preventing disease and injury. The Centers for Disease Control (CDC) has established clinical case definitions for chemical poisoning involving mercury compounds in non-occupational settings. These definitions are based on biological monitoring results.

- For elemental mercury vapor and inorganic mercury, a case of mercury poisoning is confirmed when urinary or whole blood mercury levels are  $>10 \mu\text{g/L}$ .
- For organic mercury, a case of mercury poisoning is confirmed when whole blood mercury levels are  $>10 \mu\text{g/L}$ .

Third National Report on Human Exposure to Environmental Chemicals: The "Third National Report on Human Exposure to Environmental Chemicals" (CDC, 2005) provides an assessment of the exposure of the U.S. population to environmental chemicals using biomonitoring. One of the primary purposes of this report is to establish reference ranges that can be used by physicians to determine whether an individual has been exposed to higher levels than are found in the general population. Mercury levels in blood and urine samples from a random sample of participants from the National Health and Nutrition Examination Survey (NHANES) conducted by the Centers for Disease Control and Prevention's National Center for Health Statistics are shown in the table below. People who are occupationally exposed may have higher background levels than those found in the general population.

Louisiana Mercury Poisoning Reporting Requirements

The State of Louisiana mandates that all cases of mercury poisoning and all laboratory mercury test results (regardless of the mercury levels) be reported to the Louisiana Office of Public Health. Mercury poisoning cases are defined as, "any medical condition/visit resulting from exposure as determined from the exposure history or patient statement and/or acute, subacute, or chronic illness or injury resulting from inhalation, ingestion, dermal exposure or ocular contact."

Cases of mercury poisoning in adults and children must be reported to the Office of Public Health's Section of Environmental Epidemiology and Toxicology via
