Deafness is a low incidence disability and therefore not studied or understood in the same way as other disabilities Historically research in deafness has been conducted by a small group of individuals who communicated mainly with each other That is not to say that we did not sometimes publish in the mainstream or attempt to communicate outside our small circle Nonetheless most research appeared in deafness related publications where it was not likely to be seen or valued by psychologists Those researchers did not understand what they could learn from the study of deaf people or how their knowledge of individual differences and abilities applied to that population In Deafness Deprivation and IQ Jeffrey Braden pulls together two often unrelated fields studies of intelligence and deafness The book includes the largest single compilation of data describing deaf people's intelligence that exists Here is a careful well documented and very thorough analysis of virtually all the research available Those who have studied human intelligence have long noted that deafness provides a natural experiment This book makes evident two contrary results on the one hand some research points to the impact deafness has on intelligence on the other hand the research supports the fact that deafness has very little if any impact on nonverbal measures of intelligence Statistics of Land-grant Colleges and Universities United States. Madhubala, 2010 Contents The Study and its Importance Review of Related Literature Research Methodology Analysis and Interpretation of Data Summary and Conclusions Psychological Aspects of Physical Disability James F. Garrett, 1952 As workers in the field of rehabilitation we are realizing more and more that we do not rehabilitate people Rather we must be able to reach the heart and mind of the individual with whom we are dealing so he will want to avail himself of the services our program can provide for him His drive to accomplish his own rehabilitation must come from within himself and we must be sensitive too in the factors that can help or hinder establishing this indispensable primary base for rehabilitation Increasingly we are learning that human motivation is influenced by many things Especially important are the psychological and social factors of an individual s life These factors are important to consider early in our planning for the whole program of rehabilitation for the individual and in the evaluation of each step of its development This bulletin was written primarily for vocational rehabilitation counselors It is expected that it will assist them in planning better rehabilitation programs The need for awareness of the psychological adjustment mechanisms of the physically disabled is not confined to the counselor however and it is hoped that physicians social workers psychologists and placement specialists may profit from the contents of this publication The cooperation and coordination of the various specialties is the most important element today in providing rehabilitation services for the disabled whereby they may take their rightful place as contributing members of society The interest and cooperation of the authors and the organizations many of them represent is a practical demonstration of the vital nature of the material presented herein We are aware of the fact that successful rehabilitation programs depend on integrated community activity and in a sense this bulletin epitomizes that approach Foreword
