abstract As first approach to the topic it seems helpful to me to define which factors make a region In general the literature mentions three ways how regions could be differentiated Definition through enumeration i e with examples Definition in the negative through enumeration of non regions Definition on basis if constructive criteria Most common in literature is the last approach meanwhile the European Union in particular also follows the first possibility for defining the regions within the E U As a workable definition of a region the following definition on basis of constructive criteria is suggested Regions A region is a geographical part of a whole economy that could be identified by means of political and administrative institutions As constructive criteria a region is defined through free trade between certain regions mobility of production factors consistent currency fiscal and macro economic policy and shared superior institutions The wider a nations area is and the more regions a nation contains the bigger the chance that the regions have different levels of economic development and economic power The overall development of an economy is the sum of the development of the individual regions more exactly the sum of individual economies From this follows that the economic power of the certain regions must be bettered should the macroeconomic development be improved This cognition lead to the development of a special field of public policy regional economic policies Regional policy should achieve two major goals maximise economic growth and minimise social costs As I would show in the next chapter regional economic policy includes a number of instruments From this the definition of regional policy is as follows Regional policy Regional policy is the sum of law strategies and measures for setting and influencing a framework and processes in particular areas of a nation through the government With special regional policy government seeks to reduce spatial disparities in economic

Empirical Regional Economics Richard S. Conway Jr., 2022-04-23 This textbook offers an introduction to empirical regional economics including a comprehensive and systematic overview of the fundamentals history development and applications of economic base models It not only provides a sound basis for regional economics and regional economic analysis but it also includes numerous applications of the underlying theory The book has an empirical orientation highlighting the value of observation and testing in order to explain regional economic behavior Theory plays an important role in this study but it is only a starting point The book is divided into three parts the first discusses the economic base theory of regional growth and the empirical evidence supporting it while the second part covers the specification and application of four increasingly complex regional economic models the economic base model the input output model the interindustry econometric model and the structural time series model Lastly the third part presents forty eight regional economic case studies organized under seven headings including economic cycles economic policy and regional forecasting Given its scope the book appeals to upper undergraduate and graduate students majoring in economics economic geography and business as well as to anyone in the private or public sector interested in gaining a better understanding of practical methods of regional economic forecasting and analysis For additional course

Folmer, 2012-12-06 Impact analysis of economic policy is a subject which is gaining in creasing interest in both theoretical and applied economic research Two main reasons for the growing interest can be distinguished First the situation of the government's finances is making it more than ever necessary to assess critically the effects of the instruments used to pursue public policy goals Secondly because of the economic stagnation government will be increasingly appealed to for support Impact analysis however is hampered by three major problems methodological deficiencies lack of econometric approaches which have been adapted to the specific conditions of this kind of analysis and data availability The present book deals with these problems in the context of regional economic policy However the main findings are broadly applicable in various other fields This book is primarily oriented towards those who have a practical interest Therefore attention is mostly paid to the practical aspects of the methodology and the measurements methods Furthermore the methodologi cal and econometric parts are supplemented by two extensive case studies Three people have contributed constructive criticisms and suggestions on some chapters of the book Peter Nijkamp Theo Dijkstra and Manfred Fischer I am very grateful for their support They of course share no blame for any deficiencies in the present form of the book I also gratefully acknowledge the assistance of Harry Barkema and Marja
