Rustication Of Urban Youth In China:

The Rustication of Urban Youth in China Peter J. Seybolt, 2015-12-22 In the 1960s and 70s the government of China conducted a rather unusual social experiment called Up to the mountains and down to the village which sent urban youths to the countryside in an attempt to reverse the flow of the rural population migrating to towns and cities as was generally occurring in other parts of the world at that time Originally published in 1975 Seybolt draws together a compilation of documents discussing the project which sent roughly 12 million urban youths to settle in the countryside in the years 1968 1975 alone The documents discuss issues such as university love and marriage as well as the details of the experiment This title will be of interest to students of sociology anthropology and Asian studies

China's Sent-Down

Generation Helena K. Rene, 2013-03-29 During China's Cultural Revolution Chairman Mao Zedong's rustication program resettled 17 million urban youths known as sent downs to the countryside for manual labor and socialist reeducation. This book, the most comprehensive study of the program to be published in either English or Chinese to date, examines the mechanisms and dynamics of statecraft in China from the rustication program's inception in 1968 to its official termination in 1980 and actual completion in the 1990s. Rustication in the ideology of Mao's peasant-based revolution formed a critical component of the Cultural Revolution's larger attack on bureaucrats, capitalists, the intelligentsia, and degenerative urban life. This book assesses the program's origins, development, organization, implementation, performance, and public administrative consequences. It was the defining experience for many Chinese born between 1949 and 1962, and many of China's contemporary leaders went through the rustication program. The author explains the lasting impact of the rustication program on China's contemporary administrative culture, for example, showing how and why bureaucracy persisted and even grew stronger during the wrenching chaos of the Cultural Revolution. She also focuses on the special difficulties female sent downs faced in terms of work pressures to marry local peasants and sexual harassment, predation, and violence. The author's parents were both sent downs, and she was able to interview over fifty former sent downs from around the country, something never previously accomplished. China's Sent Down Generation demonstrates the rustication program's profound long-term consequences for China's bureaucracy, for the spread of corruption, and for the families traumatized by this authoritarian social experiment. The book will appeal to academics, graduate and undergraduate students in public administration and China studies programs, and individuals who are interested in China's Cultural Revolution era. Higher Education, Meritocracy and Inequality in China Ye Liu, 2016-10-08 This book investigates the changing opportunities in higher education for different social groups during China's transition from the socialist regime to a market economy. The first part of the book provides a historical and comparative analysis of the development of the idea of meritocracy since its early origins in China and in more recent western thought. The second part then explores higher education reforms in China, the part played by supposedly meritocratic forms of selection, and the implications of these for social mobility. Based on original empirical data, Ye Liu sheds light on the socio-economic, gender, and geographical inequalities behind the meritocratic facade of the Gaokao. Liu argues that the Chinese philosophical belief in education-based meritocracy had a modern makeover in the Gaokao and that this ideology induces working-class and rural students to believe in upward social mobility through higher education. When the Gaokao broke the promise of status improvement for rural students, they turned to the Chinese Communist Party and sought political connections by actively applying for its membership. This book reveals a bleak picture of visible and invisible inequality in terms of access to and participation in higher education in contemporary China. Written in an accessible style, it offers a valuable resource for researchers and non-specialist readers alike. The Fading of the Maoist Vision Rhoads Murphey, 2013-11-05 First published in 1980, this book analyzes Chinese society and evaluates the achievements and failures of the Maoist ideology The central theme is the urban and rural balance in China's development from the Revolution to the late twentieth century The Fading of the Maoist Vision shows how the original Revolutionary blueprint was altered and the ways in which China has steered a different course from that charted by Mao as the ideological vision encountered an increasingly pressing set of economic realities The book is particularly valuable in setting China's achievements in the larger context of global ideas about the problems of national development and by comparing them to the experience of India in its pursuit of the Gandhian ideal
