

GEOMETRIC METAPHORS OF LIFE

A Lecture by Stan Tenen, 16 February 1989, San Francisco, CA

By his own admission, Stan Tenen is unsure if his work actually represents the beginnings of a major breakthrough in the study of Kabbalah, consciousness, physics, and cosmology, or just seems to do so. "I'm going to say 'is' when I mean 'may be,'" he tells us, "and all of these findings must be subjected to peer review." But even as Tenen urges us to watch with a critical eye, he powerfully communicates an infectious sense of excitement.

What exactly has Tenen seemingly discovered? Nothing less than a mathematical and geometrical model for the self-organizing and self-referential processes of consciousness and life itself, a model which is encoded into the very shapes and sequence of the letters of the first passage of Genesis! (See A Higher Geometry by Jay Kinney in GNOSIS #3 for a more detailed explanation of these concepts.) The tape is a whirlwind: Using 3-dimensional hand-held models, quotes from the Zohar and other mystical Jewish texts, and insights from quantum physics, Tenen takes us from his original 1968 discovery that the first letters of Genesis, when placed in a Cartesian coordinate system based on a base-3 counting system, reveal startling symmetries, to his discovery that various shadows cast by a stylized candle flame produce startlingly accurate portrayals of all of the letters of the Hebrew alphabet. Tenen then goes on to explain what these patterns might mean and how they might offer us a guide to understanding and entering into transcendent states of consciousness.

While Tenen's ideas are not always easy to follow, the videotape format is a perfect vehicle for presenting this highly visual material. The tape comes with a packet of illustrations, information, and instructions, and the instructions even urge the viewer to use her VCR's "pause button" to more slowly and carefully study the geometrical models presented. The tape itself is generally well-made, although the picture and sound quality does vary at times. For those who want to embark with Stan Tenen on a geometrical voyage through the Kabbalistic seas of sacred alphabets and consciousness, the work of the Meru Foundation, and this tape, come highly recommended.

ADDITIONAL COMMENTS ON THIS WORK:

"I have been following Stan's work for about a decade. In my mind there is little doubt that Stan has made very important discoveries about the origin of ancient alphabets, the deeper levels of meaning of sacred texts, and the role of mathematics in the history of consciousness.

"His lectures and videotapes give clear and exciting accounts of these discoveries, in a popular style which may be appreciated by anyone, and I highly recommend them. Careful attention to these presentations will permanently affect your views of history and prehistory."

Ralph Abraham, Ph.D., Prof. of Mathematics, Univ. of California, Santa Cruz

"I think [this work] is an amazing perceptual leap. It provides a visual, rather than aural pattern recognition that derives from contemporary scientific and mathematical thought to illuminate our understanding and connection to Torah. I believe he is making some important breakthroughs."

Isid Alexandrow, Ph.D., Dean, New World School of Arts, MIT Research Fellow

"Indeed, the work done by Mr. Tenen seems to represent the beginning of a major breakthrough, one which could conceivably bring into harmonious perspective not only many yet-unexplained scientific phenomena, but hopefully as well the unsatisfied quest which yet men of various cultures and religions against one another. I could well be that Mr. Tenen's discoveries may prove to represent part of the incredible beginnings of the revelatory process of universal consciousness."
