Perspectives on Arabic Linguistics XXVIII Youssef A. Haddad, Eric Potsdam, 2016-05-25 This volume makes important contributions to the growing body of descriptive and theoretical studies in Arabic linguistics. It focuses on the rich linguistic work being done on Arabic dialects. The papers on individual dialects draw attention to the micro variation that exists and emphasize that they do not comprise a uniform group and reveal the implications of dialectal variation for linguistic theory. The chapters are distributed over three parts: phonetics and phonology, syntax and sociolinguistics. They address first and second language acquisition, historical linguistics, phonetics, aspects of negation, light verb constructions, raising verbs and sociolinguistic variation. The book is indispensable reading for those working in dialect description, the analysis of Arabic and the Semitic languages and linguistic theory more generally. Perspectives on Arabic Linguistics V Symposium on Arabic Linguistics (Univ. of Michigan), Mushira Eid, 1990. The syntax and morphosyntax papers explore issues ranging from the nature of extraction strategies to various types of Construct State representations and the proper analysis of the distribution of the nominal adjectival and verbal morphological features. The computational linguistics papers focus on the challenge posed by the non concatenative nature of Arabic morphology. The authors illustrate how their programs can handle Arabic morphology. The papers in morpho phonology and historical linguistics deal with the development of the Arabic complementizer system and the empirical and theoretical problems that arise in the context of hypocoristic formation in Arabic. The sociolinguistics papers take up the issues of sociolinguistic variation as they pertain to the phenomenon of diglossia and regional uses of the Standard variety of Arabic. Perspectives on Arabic Linguistics XV Dilworth B.
