Regulation Theory and Australian Capitalism Brett Heino, 2017-11-22 The end of the post World War II long boom in the mid 1970s proved the beginning of a process of political economic change that has fundamentally transformed labour law both in Australia and across the developed world more generally This is a phenomenon with deep ramifications for social justice The dissolution of productive industry the fragmentation of employment categories the rise of profound employment precarity and an increasingly hostile legal environment for trade unionism have been of immense significance for key social justice issues including income inequality the rise of a new working underclass and the marginalization of organised labour By combining the concepts of the Parisian Regulation

Approach with an explicitly Marxist jurisprudence this study offers a theoretically rigorous yet empirically sensitive account of legal transition with key case studies in the metal food processing and retail sectors Given the similar development logic of post World War II capitalism in Western societies this theory although operationalised in the Australian context can be used in the effort to explain labour law change more broadly

The Ashgate Research Companion to Planning Theory Patsy Healey, 2016-11-03 At a time of potentially radical changes in the ways in which humans interact with their environments through financial environmental and or social crises the raison d tre of spatial planning faces significant conceptual and empirical challenges This Companion presents a multidimensional collection of critical narratives of conceptual challenges for spatial planning The authors draw on various disciplinary traditions and theoretical frames to explore different ways of conceptualising spatial planning and the challenges it faces

Through problematising planning itself the values which underpin planning and theory practice relations contributions make visible the limits of established planning theories and illustrate how by thinking about new issues or about issues in new ways spatial planning might be advanced both theoretically and practically There cannot be definitive answers to the conceptual challenges posed but the authors in this collection provoke critical questions and debates over important issues for spatial planning and its future A key question is not so much what planning theory is but what might planning theory do in times of uncertainty and complexity An underlying rationale is that planning theory and practice are intrinsically connected The Companion is presented in three linked parts issues which arise from an interactive understanding of the relations between planning ideas and the political institutional contexts in which such ideas are put to work key concepts in current theorising from mainly poststructuralist perspectives and what discussion on complexity may offer planning theory and practice

Globalization and Integrated Area Development in European Cities Frank Moulaert, 2000-10-26 In this book the author seeks to rebut the somewhat fatalistic argument that socio economic prosperity in the cities can only be achieved by the application of global market led policies He argues that urban society and policy makers do have sufficient freedom of action to make local decisions on the economic and social development of deprived neighbourhoods Drawing on evidence from six major European cities he demonstrates that their Integrated Area Development strategies which rely on grassroots democracy and the empowerment of local communities can deliver a social economic and cultural renaissance which meets the needs of the local population more effectively than the market forces creed
