Constructions of Gender in Religious Traditions of Late Antiquity Kathy Ehrensperger, Juni Hoppe, Shayna Sheinfeld, 2024-03-26 This volume examines questions concerning the construction of gender and identity in the earliest days of what is now Judaism Christianity and Islam Methodologically explicit the contributions analyze textual and material sources related to these religious traditions in their cultural contexts The sources examined are predominantly products of patriarchal elite discourses requiring innovative approaches to unveil aspects of gender otherwise hidden This volume extends the discussion represented in the volume Gender and Second Temple Judaism 2020 and highlights the fruitfulness of interdisciplinary research beyond anachronistic discipline distinctions

Celtic Christianity Christopher Bamford, William Parker Marsh, 1987 Our God is the God of Heaven and Earth of sea and river of sun and moon and stars of the lofty mountain and lowly valley St Patrick In this anthology the stories of the Celtic saints are interspersed with verses prayers and sayings attributed to those ancient sages from Patrick and Brigit through Brandan and Columba to Aidan and Cuthbert It is uncertain when or how Christianity first arrived at those westernmost reaches It seems always to have been there Legend tells us that Irish bards attended the events on Golgotha in the spirit In the Celtic tradition there is a continuity in cosmic process For the Celt Christ's death and resurrection was a healing that allows reconciliation between humanity and nature in God In this sense Christianity was always in Ireland and we seek its historical beginning in vain If the Celtic Church had survived perhaps the fissure between Christianity and nature widening through the centuries would never have fragmented our Western attitude toward nature and the universe
