Choice and Allocation Models for the Housing Market J. Rouwendal, 2012-12-06 It is generally agreed that food clothing and shelter are the three basic material needs of all people A simple test for the successfulness of any economic system may therefore be the extent to which it succeeds in providing the population with these commodities One would conjecture that in the countries that are generally considered as highly developed there would be no problems at all with their availability And although this conjecture is to a large extent confirmed by the evidence it is nevertheless surprising that in western economies with the high per capita incomes housing is still an important object for public concern Food and clothing are abundantly available in these countries but the provision of housing is often an object of serious policy concern To mention one striking example in the Netherlands there still exist official figures that mention housing shortages of ten thousands of dwellings This state of affairs is not mentioned here to motivate an exaggerated view on housing problems in Western countries The situation in the Netherlands and comparable countries is indeed much better than that in underdeveloped countries and a comparison with developing countries would presumably show figures which are comparable to those for food or clothing The point I want to make is that even in highly developed market economies where the availability of food and clothing is quite satisfactory the availability of dwellings often is not Investigating Quality of Urban Life Robert W. Marans, Robert J. Stimson, 2011-08-31 The study of quality of urban life involves both an objective approach to analysis using spatially aggregated secondary data and a subjective approach using unit record survey data whereby people provide subjective evaluations of QOL domains This book provides a comprehensive overview of theoretical perspectives on QOUL and methodological approaches to research design to investigate QOUL and measure QOL dimensions It incorporates empirical investigations into QOUL in a range of cities across the world Homeowners and Neighborhood Reinvestment George C. Galster, 1987 This book investigates the efforts of homeowners to maintain and improve their dwelling Their behavior it has found depends on economic variables as well as the sociological structure of their neighborhoods Residential satisfaction expectations of the neighborhood and mobility plans were taken into account Multivariate statistical analyses of models were conducted using household data from Minneapolis and Wooster Ohio Three important findings emerged First homeowners sense of solidarity with their neighbors is as significant in determining their efforts at home upkeep as are their income or age Second the optimism of homeowners toward increases in property values results in behavior opposite to that produced by optimism about neighborhood quality of life This implies that different kinds of predictable gaming behavior occur among homeowners depending on the neighborhoods in which they live Third both short term and extremely long term plans to move prove damaging to home upkeep The results of this study form the basis for a better understanding of such residential phenomena as class succession racial transition and gentrification Galster's findings will also be valuable for analyzing policies that attempt to encourage neighborhood reinvestment

Commuting and Relocation of Jobs and Residences Jos Ommeren, 2018-04-27 This title was first published in 2000 An analysis of commuting behaviour from an integrated labour and housing market perspective A theoretical search model is proposed and analyzed with an emphasis on two owner households The book provides insights into the relationship between job and residential moving and commuting behaviour

Urban residential location models S.H. Putman, 2012-12-06 The decade of the 1970 s has seen substantial improvement in our understanding of the determinants of urban spatial patterns It is typical of western science and technology of the past several centuries that these advances in urban spatial analysis have resulted from the efforts of many individuals No one of these claims to have found the answer rather each contributes some additional understanding of a rather complex set of inter related phenomena All of this most recent work in one way or another rests on preliminary analysis work done in the previous ten to fifteen years Those earlier efforts are the subject of this book A very few studies of urban spatial patterns were done prior to 1960 However it was not until then with the coming of age of electronic data processing machinery that work began in earnest Many theories and theoretical models of urban form were postulated and some were tested Often the tests were inconclusive or unsuccessful The theories often lacked consistency and coherence Some of the testing was inadequate or even inappropriate Much of the research was done amidst the turmoil and sometimes chaos of attempted and often premature application The results were frequently incompletely described if described at all Yet out of all this there began to emerge some clearer notion of the determinants of urban spatial patterns

Handbook of Regional and Urban Economics P. Nijkamp, Edwin S. Mills, P. C. Cheshire, 1986 This second volume of the Handbook presents professional surveys of all the important topics in urban economics The first section contains 6 surveys on locational analysis the second 5 surveys of specific urban markets and the third part presents 5 surveys of government policy issues The book brings together exhaustive research by distinguished scholars from many countries It is the only complete survey volume of urban economics and should serve as a reference volume to scholars and graduate

Service Industries and Regions Juan R. Cuadrado-Roura, 2013-03-26 The service sector in most advanced economies accounts for up to seventy percent of employment and GDP and given its growing importance has received much research attention over the last two decades However not very much attention has been paid to the relationship between this sector and both its territorial impact and regional effects The main objective of this book is to offer a comprehensive approach to these aspects focusing particularly on the location factors of service industries and the importance of some specific services such as business services and knowledge and information services The contributions have been prepared by well known experts in the field from a wide number of countries The focus of all contributions is not only on theoretical aspects but also provides empirical analyses on specific countries and topics such as the geographical concentration globalization impacts foreign direct investments and innovation

New Directions in Urban-Rural Migration David L. Brown, John M. Wardwell, 2013-10-02 New Directions in Urban Rural Migration The Population Turnaround in Rural America covers a wide ranging treatment of urban rural migration and population growth in contemporary America The book discusses the national and regional changes in internal migration and population distribution the regional diversity and complexity of economic structure in modern day rural America and the reasons for the gap or lag between changed conditions and unchanged policy The text also describes the turnaround s implications for new models of migration the economic framework for the turnaround and the traditional concept of the migrant as labor and the structural conditions within and between areas that fix the demand for labor Migration trends and consequences in rapidly growing areas as well as data resources for population distribution research are also considered Sociologists and people involved in studying migration will find the book invaluable

Revealed Preference Approaches to Environmental Valuation Volumes I and II Catherine L. Kling,2019-01-22 In this two volume collection the editors have chosen a sample of some of the most essential and inspirational articles and papers for understanding revealed preference methods to value environmental amenities The papers cover the gamut of methods that are typically classified as revealed preference approaches including recreation demand models hedonic methods and averting behavior methods as well as efforts to combine stated and revealed preferences While this collection is far from exhaustive the editors have included papers they believe will represent the state of the art in the theory and application of revealed preference methods contribute to development of the state of the art or raise fundamental challenges and insights that will drive the research agenda in the coming years

The New Urban Economics H.W. Richardson,2013-04-15 This book was first published in 1977 Urban economics is a relatively young field of economics hardly existing except perhaps in real estate and land economics curricula before the 1960s Within the last few years especially after 1 971 there has been a growth of interest in urban economic theory strong enough even to attract the attention of general economic theorists These new theoretical writings have been named the New Urban Economics NUE for short The aim of this monograph is to survey and assess NUE to evaluate its contribution to urban economics to offer a few extensions and to say something about the future direction of the subfield
