Roman Constantinople in Byzantine Perspective Paul Magdalino, 2024-06-03. This book studies the research perspective in which the literary inhabitants of Late Antique and medieval Constantinople remembered its past and conceptualised its existence as a Greek city that was the political capital of a Christian Roman state. Initial reactions to Constantine's foundation noted its novel Christian orientation but the memorial mode of writing about the city that developed from the sixth century recollected the traditional civic cultural heritage that Constantinople claimed both as the New Rome and as the continuation of ancient Byzantium. This research culture increasingly became the preserve of the imperial bureaucracy and focused on the city's sculptured monuments as bearers of eschatological meaning. Yet from the tenth century writers progressively preferred to define the wonder and spectacle of Constantinople in the aesthetic mode of urban praise inherited from late antiquity, developing the notion of the city as a cosmic theatre of excellence.

Literary History: Towards a Global Perspective Anders Pettersson, Gunilla Lindberg-Wada, Margareta Petersson, Stefan Helgesson, 2011-12-22. Literary History Towards a Global Perspective is a research project funded by the Swedish Research Council Vetenskapsr det. Initiated in 1996 and launched in 1999, it aims at finding suitable methods and approaches for studying and analysing literature globally, emphasizing the comparative and intercultural aspect. Even though we nowadays have fast and easy access to any kind of information on literature and literary history, we encounter more than ever the difficulty of finding a credible overall perspective on world literary history. Until today, literary cultures and traditions have usually been studied separately, each field using its own principles and methods. Even the conceptual basis itself varies from section to section, and the genre concepts employed are not mutually compatible. As a consequence, it is very difficult, if not impossible, for the interested layperson as well as for the professional student to gain a clear and fair perspective both on the literary traditions of other peoples and on one's own traditions. The project can be considered as a contribution to gradually removing this problem and helping to gain a better understanding of literature and literary history by means of a concerted empirical research and deeper conceptual reflection. The contributions to the four volumes are written in English by specialists from a large number of disciplines, primarily from the fields of comparative literature, Oriental studies, and African studies in Sweden. All of the literary texts discussed in the articles are in the original language. Each one of the four volumes is devoted to a special research topic.

The Philosophy of Fiction Patrik Engisch, Julia Langkau, 2022-10-14. This book presents new research on the crucial role that imagination plays in contemporary philosophy of fiction. The first part of the book challenges the main paradigm set by Kendall Walton and Gregory Currie, according to which there is a necessary connection between fiction and a prescription that we engage imaginatively with its content. The contributors address the fundamental questions of how we can define fiction and especially whether we can define fiction in terms of imagination The second part focuses on a distinct but related question can we point to some distinctive experiential features of our engagement with fiction In the third part the focus lies on the cognitive value of fiction and on the role that imagination plays in that respect The chapters in this part discuss the cognitive value of fiction with respect to issues such as the training of the faculty of imagination phenomenal experience empathy and the emotions The Philosophy of Fiction will be of interest to scholars and advanced students working in aesthetics philosophy of mind epistemology and literary studies Chapter 13 of this book is available for free in PDF format as Open Access from the individual product page at www.routledge.com It has been made available under a Creative Commons Attribution Non Commercial No Derivatives 4.0 license
