RIGHTS THEORIES

MORAL RIGHTS

Moral rights as opposed to legal rights are not dependant on a political system for their legitimacy. This is the category of rights that all human air-breathers, as opposed to non-human air-breathers--- should be afforded to them by virtue of their having intrinsic value and not only instrumental value. These rights, or entitlements, are supported by various ethical theories when for instance the Universalism thesis under Utilitarianism requires that all persons' (women's and men's) interests be considered in the calculations of Hedonistic options available.

Kantianism insists that all Universizable maxims be respectful of the rights of all persons to be treated with dignity and respect-which includes freedom of choice. Virtue ethics, more modernly, does not distinguish basic "good " character traits of excellence such as integrity, good judgment, role identity-not as a woman or a man in any given role but, the ability to fulfill the duties of that role within a community by a member of either sex---, holism-the ability to habitually practice the other virtues in an integrative manner while recognizing the importance of other persons to the community and vise versa. The various Justice theories do not relegate justice based on sex, just on relevant differences based on ability, endeavor, contribution, etc.

LEGAL RIGHTS

Legal rights are those set of rights that require recognition and enforceability by a given political system e.g. the U.S. and each state government. For instance, U.S. citizens cannot expect to have their civil rights recognized, except under limited Fortnight ,1979 Coping with Threatened Identities Glynis M. Breakwell,2015-06-19 People cope with threats to their identities in many different ways Until the original publication of this title in 1986 there had been no theoretical framework within which to analyse their strategies for doing this or to examine the nature and impact of the threatening experiences themselves In this elegant and original book Glynis Breakwell proposes an integrative model which explores the structure of identity and the principles directing its development Focusing on examples of threat such as unemployment sexually atypical employment and ethnic marginality Breakwell examines the relation of the individual to social change Through her sensitive use of case studies she enables the victims of threat to speak for themselves about their experiences and feelings Their reactions illustrate her proposed framework of three levels of coping strategies intra psychic interpersonal and intergroup and her assessment of the factors which limit the success of such strategies The case studies also point to new evidence on the effects of unemployment and the impact of youth training schemes at the time This title would have been essential reading for a range of undergraduate courses in social and abnormal psychology and individual differences as well as for postgraduate training in clinical and medical psychology at the time Social workers counsellors and all those concerned with the care of the sufferers of threatened identities will still find it both informative and influential A Dictionary of Slang and Unconventional English Eric Partridge,1984 The definitive work on slang and unconventional English this edition is fully revised and updated by Paul Beale and includes some 500 new entries The dictionary gives a fully documented account of English slang over four centuries and will entertain and inform all lovers of the English language Index to Religious Periodical Literature American Theological Library Association,1971 Vols for 1975 76 Jan June 1977 also include abstracts The Georgians Penelope J.
