Olympic Torch Relay, 2014

From ritual invention to ritual entrepreneurship Jeffrey Owen Segrave, 2003 Through an effective historical narrative the authors examine the conception of the torch relay as an example of ritual invention They argue that the torch relay became institutionalized within Olympic ceremonial protocol ultimately becoming an example of ritual entrepreneurship They begin their narrative in ancient times discussing the inspiration for the torch relay that was drawn from antiquity Moving to the modern period the authors chronologically outline the conception of the torch relay which Carl Diem incorporated as a modern Olympic ritual at the 1936 Games They indicate that the first step in the institutionalization process of the torch relay occurred in 1949 when the relay was added to Olympic Games protocol in the Olympic Charter Segrave and Barney go beyond a simple narrative of events to discuss the increasing commercialization of the torch relay and how it became an example of ritual entrepreneurship
