CHAPTER I INTRODUCTION TO PERSONALITY THEORY

I. What Is Personality?

- Latin word: persona = the mask people wear or the role they play in life. (But its more than just a façade)
- a pattern of relatively permanent traits and unique characteristics that give both consistency and individuality to human behavior
- Traits: it may be unique, common to some group, or shared by the entire species BUT the pattern is different for each individual (consistency & stability of behavior over time)
- Characteristics: unique qualities of an individual that include such attributes as temperament, physique and intelligence

II. What is a Theory?

A. Theory Defined

- Set of related assumptions that allows scientists to use logical deductive reasoning to formulate testable hypotheses
- Set: A single assumption can never fill all the requirements of a good theory
- Related: Isolated assumptions can neither generate meaningful hypotheses nor possess internal consistency
- Assumptions: not proven facts but accepted as if they were true
- Logical Deductive Reasoning: to deduce a clearly stated hypothesis
- Testable: must suggest the possibility that scientists

B. Theory and Its Relatives

- Philosophy. Theory is related to philosophy, but it is a much narrower term.
- Speculation. Theories rely on speculation, but they are much more than mere armchair speculation.
- Hypothesis. Although theory is a narrower concept than philosophy, it is a broader term than hypothesis.
- Taxonomy. Mere classification does not constitute a theory. However, taxonomies can evolve into theories when they begin to generate testable hypotheses and to explain research findings.
- Relationship between theory and science. Theories are useful tools employed by scientists to give meaning and organization to observations. In addition, theories provide fertile ground for producing testable hypotheses.

C. Why Different Theories?

- Theories are built not on proven facts but on assumptions (assumed to be true) that are subject to individual interpretations
- Reflection of their personal background, their philosophical orientation, and the data they chose to observe
- Its usefulness depends on its ability to generate research and to explain research data and other observations

Review Of Personality Theories:

A REVIEW OF PERSONALITY THEORIES Victor J. Drapela, 1995-01-01 Personality theories are frameworks devised by professionals to interpret the interaction of dynamic forces operating in every person's life. This text explains in basic terms the following major theories: Psychoanalytic Theory, Analytic Theory, Individual Psychology, Interpersonal Theories, Psychosocial Theories, Learning Theory, Trait and Factor Theory, Field Theory, Phenomenology and Existentialism, Self Theory, Holistic Theory, Logo therapy, and Systemic Eclecticism. It is organized as a study guide to help the reader gain basic insights into various interpretations of the role that personality dynamics assume in human behavior. The author makes a conscious effort to keep the language clear and simple, avoiding unneeded technical terms. However, full recognition is given to the distinctive terminology developed by certain theorists. To lend a degree of concreteness to abstract ideas, explanatory drawings have been included wherever appropriate. This book will prove useful to students in counselor education and other applied psychology programs, particularly when reviewing personality theories for comprehensive or qualifying examinations. It is also a useful resource to practitioners preparing for certification or licensure tests. Additionally, the book may be of interest to persons of many walks of life who want to better understand the many and diverse interpretations of human behavior and of the dynamic forces within personality.
