Salunkhe, S.S. Deshpande, 2012-12-06 The present world population of about five billion and its projected growth create enormous pressures and demands for food and industrial raw materials It is to crop plants one of our precious few renewable resources that we must look to meet most of these needs Globally about 88% of our caloric requirements and 90% of our protein ultimately derive from plant sources ample evidence of their importance to humankind Our survival will therefore continue to depend on the world's largest and certainly most important industry agriculture Yet in spite of our long history of domestication and civilization the number of crop species involved in sustaining human life is strictly limited Essentially some twenty four crops protect us from starvation To know these basic food crop plants to study how they function and how their productivity may be improved is the first step in solving the world food problem The primary objectives in writing this book were to address this challenge and to review comprehensively the wealth of available yet scattered information on food crop productivity and processing Unlike several other texts and monographs in this field the present work was intended to give in a single volume a quick informative view of the various problems from field to table concerning the major food crops worldwide Abstracts on Tropical Agriculture, 1987 POSTHARVEST BIOTECHNOLOGY OF CEREALS Salunkhe, J. K. Chavan, Kadam, 1985-04-19 Post-Harvest Physiology and Crop Preservation Morris Lieberman, 2012-12-06 Emphasis in agricultural research for many years has concentrated on crop production This emphasis has become more important in recent years with the realization that the population worldwide is outstripping the food supply There is however another side to increasing the availability of the food supply This simply involves preservation of the harvested crop for human consumption The losses incurred in harvesting handling transportation storage and marketing crops have become a greater problem as the distance from the farm to the ultimate consumer increases In the Western world where modern transportation storage facilities and marketing technology are widely used post harvest technology requires a large input of energy which increases costs considerably Therefore losses are more significant and the ability to provide fresh fruits and vegetables out of season at reasonable costs will depend on reduced post harvest losses throughout the marketing chain from the farm gate to the ultimate consumer The reduction in post harvest losses depends on proper use of current technology and further developments derived from a broad spectrum of scientific disciplines Biochemistry plant physiology plant pathology horticulture agronomy physics engineering and agricultural economics all provide knowledge which has been useful and will be useful in the future for improving post harvest technology and crop preservation This volume records the Proceedings of the NATO Advanced Study Institute on Post Harvest Physiology and Crop Preservation held at Sounion Greece April 28 May 8 1981     The Publishers' Trade List Annual ,1991     Jamaican Food B. W. Higman,2008 This beautifully illustrated book by one of the Caribbean s preeminent historians sheds new light on food and cultural practices in Jamaica from the time of the earliest Taino inhabitants through the 21st century
