Quality-of-Life Research in Chinese, Western and Global Contexts Daniel T.L. Shek, Ying Keung Chan, Paul S.N. Lee, 2005-06-08 The majority of studies on the quality of life have been conducted in Western contexts and are based on Western participants Comparatively speaking there are only a few studies that have been conducted in different Chinese contexts Also there are fewer QOL studies based on children and adolescents or studies that examine the relationship between QOL and economic disadvantage. In addition, more research is needed to address the methodological issues related to the assessment of quality of life. This volume is a constructive response to the challenges described above. It is the first book to cover research in Chinese, Western, and global contexts in a single volume. It is a ground-breaking volume in which Chinese studies on the quality of life are collected. The book includes papers addressing family QOL, quality of life in adolescents experiencing economic disadvantage, and methodological issues in the assessment of QOL. It is written by researchers working in a variety of disciplines.

The Plight of Older Workers Isabel Baumann, 2016-09-08. This open access book examines the economic, social, and psychological consequences of manufacturing plant closure at the individual level. Using an original data set of over 1,200 workers from Switzerland who lost their manufacturing jobs after the financial crisis of 2008, the author analyzes the determinants of reemployment, the sector of reemployment, and the change in wages over a two-year period. In addition, coverage also explores how plant closure affects the social relationship between a displaced worker and his or her significant other, which includes a discussion of the coping strategies on the household level as well as how changes in a worker's social and occupational life affect overall satisfaction. Readers will discover that the burden of structural change disproportionately falls on the shoulders of workers aged 55 and older who often face substantial barriers when trying to return to employment. A larger portion of this group experience long-term unemployment, and those who do manage to find a new job often suffer disproportionate wage loss. This result is intriguing in the context of the current demographic change and contradicts the common assumption that young and low-qualified individuals are at greatest risk of unemployment. Advanced age and not low education appears to be the primary obstacle to workers finding job satisfaction after being laid off because of market conditions.

SECTION I
UNDERSTANDING QUALITY OF LIFE IN OLD AGE ALAN WALKER AND HEIDRUN MOLLENKOPF 1
INTERNATIONAL AND MULTIDISCIPLINARY PERSPECTIVES ON QUALITY OF LIFE IN OLD AGE

Conceptual issues Quality of life QoL is a multidimensional holistic construct assessed from many different perspectives and by many disciplines Moreover the concept of QoL can be applied to practically all important domains of life Thus QoL research has to include social environmental structural and health related aspects and be approached from an interdisciplinary perspective This holds even more when QoL in old age is the focus because ageing itself is a multidimensional process

Qualitative Indicators of Labour Standards David Kucera, 2007-03-11 Recent years have witnessed a rapidly growing interest in the use and construction of qualitative indicators of labour standards Qualitative indicators while generally having numerical values are based on such methods as grading by experts the coding of legislation and the coding of other textual sources addressing violations of a more de facto nature Measuring compliance with labour standards is an undertaking intrinsically fraught with difficulty For there are a number of possible sources of measurement error both random and non random that are unique to such indicators on top of those that affect qualitative and quantitative indicators alike The growing use of qualitative indicators of labour standards thus raises a number of questions about comparative methods of construction as well as the appropriateness of particular methods for particular applications This volume results from a seminar that was organized to address these and related questions

Quality of Life in Ireland Tony Fahey, Helen Russell, Christopher T. Whelan, 2008-06-11 Frances Ruane Director Economic and Social Research Institute Irish and international scholars continue to be curious about Ireland's exceptional economic success since the early 1990s While growth rates peaked at the turn of the millennium they have since continued at levels that are high by any current international or historical Irish measures Despite differences of view among Irish economists and policymakers on the relative importance of the factors that have driven growth there is widespread agreement that the process of globalisation has contributed to Ireland's economic development In this context it is helpful to recognise that globalisation has created huge changes in most developed and developing countries and has been associated inter alia with reductions in global income disparity but increased income disparity within individual countries This book reflects on how from a social perspective Ireland has prospered over the past decade In that period we have effectively moved from being a semi developed to being a developed economy While the book's main focus is on the social changes induced by economic growth there is also recognition that social change has facilitated economic growth Although many would regard the past decade as a period when economic and social elements have combined in a virtuous cycle there is a lingering question as to the extent to which we have better lives now that we are economically better off
