Retraining Cognition:

Retraining Cognition Rick Parenté, Douglas J. Herrmann, 2003 To date all of the books on cognitive restructuring have addressed only one component memory skills such as attention concentration rehearsal strategies This book covers these in detail but also provides the techniques for problem solving decision making concept learning organization planning other reasoning skills External aids prosthetic devices other techniques activities for improving memory reasoning skills are also covered

Retraining Cognition Rick Parenté, Douglas J. Herrmann, 1996 Summarizes many of the techniques developed over the past two decades for restoring a person's mental processes after injury to the brain and the theoretical underpinnings in cognitive psychology neuropsychology and speech and language therapy The topics include the neuropsychology of thinking

Training Cognition Alice F. Healy, Lyle E. Bourne, Jr., 2012-08-21 Training is both a teaching and a learning experience and just about everyone has had that experience Training involves acquiring knowledge and skills This newly acquired training information is meant to be applicable to specific activities tasks and jobs In modern times where jobs are increasingly more complex training workers to perform successfully is of more importance than ever The range of contexts in which training is required includes industrial corporate military artistic and sporting at all levels from assembly line to executive function The required training can take place in a variety of ways and settings including the classroom the laboratory the studio the playing field and the work environment itself The general goal of this book is to describe the current state of research on training using cognitive psychology to build a complete empirical and theoretical picture of the training process The book focuses on training cognition as opposed to physical or fitness training It attempts to show how to optimize training efficiency durability and generalizability The book includes a review of relevant cognitive psychological literature a summary of recent laboratory experiments a presentation of original theoretical ideas and a discussion of possible applications to real world training settings

Cognitive Retraining Using Microcomputers Veronica A. Bradley, John L. Welch, Clive E. Skilbeck, 1993 The last decade has seen considerable development in the field of neuropsychological rehabilitation following brain damage and the use of computerized methods has attracted attention and stimulated controversy This practically oriented text reviews representative examples from the literature relating to the training of cognitive systems with the emphasis on studies describing the use of computerized methods The topic is discussed in context and the contents include sections on cognitive change in neurological disorders assessment techniques the interaction between cognition and behaviour and the advantages and disadvantages of the use of microcomputers The authors describe the evaluation of a computerized cognitive retraining programme run at the Regional Neurological Centre in Newcastle upon Tyne and draw on their experience of running such programmes to give practical guidance to those wishing to set up cognitive retraining programmes of the leading clinicians and cognitive neuroscientists consider the effectiveness of cognitive rehabilitation They situate the issues within an overall context that considers the different types and levels of diagnosis and assessment the adequacy of underlying cognitive theory for rehabilitation and more importantly the clinical effectiveness of current treatments to improve functional recovery By employing an evidence based approach that critically evaluates the published literature the book provides for a better understanding of the strengths and limitations of the cognitive approach and hopefully a more realistic expectation of its outcome for patients with neurological deficits The book will serve as a valuable source for a wide spectrum of professionals who deal with the neuropsychological and neurological effects of brain damage BOOK JACKET

Long, J.M.

Williams, 2012-12-06 The rehabilitation of intellectual impairment resulting from brain injury has become a major professional activity of clinical neuropsychologists In recent years neuropsychology has developed from a professional role stressing assessment and diagnosis to one that now includes treatment and rehabilitation activities Such trends are also manifested in two new research interests of neuropsychologists the study of the generalizability of neuropsychological test findings to everyday abilities often referred to as the ecological validity of tests and outcome studies of cognitive retraining treatments Discovering the relationships between traditional neuropsychological tests and everyday behavior is important because the referral questions posed to neuropsychologists have changed Now the neuropsychologist is asked to comment on the patient's functional intellectual abilities as they relate to the everyday demands of home work and educational settings Of course the development of cognitive retraining theory and procedures allows neuropsychologists to intervene in the treatment of the cognitive problems that the neuropsychological evaluation has documented Since these approaches are still in their formative stages they have been the subject of clinical lore great controversy and little systematic research This situation prompted one of our presenters to lament Either you believe Cognitive Retraining is divinely inspired or the work of the devil There is apparently little middle ground Given this state of affairs the program committee of the Mid South Conference on Human Neuropsychology decided to focus on the role of neuropsychologists in rehabilitation

Emotion can impact various aspects of our cognition and behavior by enhancing or impairing them e.g. enhanced attention to and memory for emotional events or increased distraction produced by goal irrelevant emotional information On the other hand emotion processing is also susceptible to cognitive influences typically exerted in the form of cognitive control of motion or emotion regulation Despite important recent progress in understanding emotion cognition interactions a number of aspects remain unclear The present book comprises a collection of manuscripts discussing emerging evidence regarding the mechanisms underlying emotion cognition interactions in healthy functioning and alterations associated with clinical conditions in which such interactions are dysfunctional Initiated with a more restricted focus targeting 1 identification and in depth analysis of the circumstances in which emotion enhances or impairs cognition and 2 identification of the role of individual differences in these effects our book has emerged into a comprehensive collection of outstanding contributions investigating emotion cognition interactions based on approaches spanning from behavioral and lesion to pharmacological and brain imaging and including empirical theoretical and review papers alike Co hosted by the Frontiers in Neuroscience Integrative Neuroscience and Frontiers in Psychology Emotion Science the contributions comprising our book and the associated research topic are grouped around the following seven main themes distributed across the two hosting journals I Emotion and Selectivity in Attention and Memory II The Impact of Emotional Distraction Linking Enhancing and Impairing Effects of Emotion III What Really is the Role of the Amygdala IV Age Differences in Emotion Processing The Role of Emotional Valence V Affective Face Processing Social Cognition and Personality Neuroscience VI Stress Mood Emotion and the Prefrontal Cortex The Role of Control in the Stress Response VII Emotion Cognition Interactions in Clinical Conditions As illustrated by the present collection of contributions emotion cognition interactions can be identified at different levels of processing from perception and attention to long term memory decision making processes and social cognition and behavior Notably these effects are subject to individual differences that may affect the way we perceive experience and remember emotional experiences or cope with emotionally challenging situations Moreover these opposing effects tend to co occur in affective disorders such as depression and PTSD where uncontrolled recollection of and rumination on distressing memories also lead to impaired cognition due to emotional distraction Understanding the nature and neural mechanisms of these effects is critical as their exacerbation and co occurrence in clinical conditions lead to devastating effects and debilitation Hence bringing together such diverse contributions has allowed not only an integrative understanding of the current extant evidence but also identification of emerging directions and concrete venues for future investigations The Handbook of Memory Disorders Alan D.
