The Black Experience in America James C. Curtis, Lewis L. Gould, 2014-11-06 In the fall of 1968 the University of Texas at Austin sponsored a series of public lectures delivered by outstanding students of the black past in an effort to clarify the role of the African American in America's history This volume of essays by eight of the ten participants makes the lectures available to a broader public The essays demonstrate that the black experience in America has been integral throughout the nation's history Although each contributor deals with a different aspect of this experience they all share a common commitment to sound historical scholarship The essays also reflect the intensive research in the field of black history during a time of high racial tension Henry Allen Bullock in an exploration of education in the slave experience shows that despite organized attempts to dehumanize the Negro the black man's position in the American social order was not static By training and educating the Negro the slaveowner was weakening the peculiar institution and preparing the slave for freedom In the field of cultural anthropology which had largely ignored blacks in the United States William S Willis Jr examines the interaction of whites blacks and Indians on the Southern colonial frontier Arthur Zilversmit traces the development of abolitionist attitudes from patience to militance and points out that both those reformers who abandoned action and those who demanded radical violent change were forced into their positions by society's failure to listen to the arguments of moderate reformers William S McFeely takes a fresh look at the Reconstruction era one of the only times in American history when white Americans have even come close to wanting for black Americans what black Americans wanted for themselves In a discussion of protest against segregated streetcars in the South August Meier and Elliott Rudwick show that the boycotts of the late 1950s had their counterparts in more than twenty five Southern cities between 1900 and 1906 Thomas R Cripps attacks the myth of the Southern box office and shows how Hollywood's own timidity fostered racial stereotyping in American movies Robert L Zangrando outlines the role of the NAACP founded in 1909 in the evolution of civil rights protests during the mid twentieth century He argues that the organization's precarious position in American society prevented it from exercising strong leadership within the black community Louis R Harlan concludes the volume by assessing the past and looking toward the future of black history in America

Writings of Frank Marshall Davis Frank Marshall Davis, 2009-09-09 Frank Marshall Davis 1905 1987 was a central figure in the black press working as reporter and editor for the Atlanta World the Associated Negro Press the Chicago Star and the Honolulu Record Writings of Frank Marshall Davis presents a selection of Davis's nonfiction providing an unprecedented insight into one journalist's ability to reset the terms of public conversation and frame the news to open up debate among African Americans and all Americans During the middle of the twentieth century Davis set forth a radical vision that challenged the status quo His commentary on race relations music literature and American culture was precise impassioned and engaged At the height of World War II Davis boldly questioned the nature of America's potential postwar relations and what they meant for African Americans and the nation His work challenged the usefulness of race as a social construct and he eventually disavowed the idea of race altogether Throughout his career he championed the struggles of African Americans for equal rights and laboring people seeking fair wages and other benefits In his reviews on music he argued that blues and jazz were responses to social conditions and served as weapons of racial integration His book reviews complemented his radical vision by commenting on how literature reshapes one's understanding of the world Even his travel writings on Hawaii called for cultural pluralism and tolerance for racial and economic difference Writings of Frank Marshall Davis reveals a writer in touch with the most salient issues defining his era and his desire to insert them into the public sphere John Edgar Tidwell provides an introduction and contextual notes on each major subject area Davis explored John Edgar Tidwell is an associate professor of English at the University of Kansas He edited Frank Marshall Davis's Living the Blues Memoirs of a Black Journalist and Poet and his Black Moods Collected Poems Blackness, Symbolism, and American Modernism Lori Nel Johnson, 2025-04-29 In this book Lori Nel Johnson examines the work of Henry Ossawa Tanner 1859-1937 Meta Warrick Fuller 1877-1968 and F Holland Day 1864-1933 in relation to the development of modernism during the turn of the century and the official narratives surrounding this movement While Tanner and Fuller have been consistently linked in the history of American Art the Pictorialist photographer and publisher Day has rarely if ever been discussed with these two artists despite the fact that all three were rough contemporaries and affiliated with Symbolism The book compares the historical and social conditions that determined the lives and careers of these three artists which curtailed their ambitions because of the intersections of class race gender or sexuality By examining each artist's respective proximity to language on the basis of class race gender and sexuality this study avoids categorizing artists solely on the basis of difference and thus offers a more fulsome and radical reading of the development of modernism in the United States The book will be of interest to scholars of art history design history history of photography American studies and African American studies
