

➤ The basic steps involved in gene cloning are as follows:

1. A DNA fragment coding for the gene of interest is cut and inserted into the vector known as plasmid DNA. The resultant product is known as recombinant DNA molecule.
2. Plasmid is known as vector, as it acts as a vehicle for the transport of the gene into the host cell. The host cell can be bacterium, yeasts or animal cells.
3. After introduction of recombinant plasmid in the host cell, the carrier is known as recombinant host. The plasmid through the process of replication gets amplified to make large number of copies.
4. The recombinant plasmid is passed onto its progeny or F1 generation by multiplication of the bacterium; the recombinant bacterium gets multiplied through division.
5. After multiple divisions of bacterium, a clone of identical colonies is produced. Each cell in the colony contains a single clone to multiple copies of the recombinant plasmid.

❖ RECOMBINANT DNA TECHNOLOGY:

- Recombinant DNA technology, which is also called gene cloning or molecular cloning, is a general term that encompasses a number of experimental protocols leading to the transfer of genetic information (DNA) from one organism to another.
- There is no single set of methods that can be used to meet this objective; however, a recombinant DNA experiment often has the following format.
- The DNA (cloned DNA, insert DNA, target DNA, or foreign DNA) from a donor organism is extracted, enzymatically cleaved (cut, or digested), and joined (ligated) to another DNA entity (a cloning vector) to form a new, recombined DNA molecule (cloning vector– insert DNA construct, or DNA construct).
 - This cloning vector–insert DNA construct is transferred into and maintained within a host cell. The introduction of DNA into a bacterial host cell is called transformation.
 - Those host cells that take up the DNA construct (transformed cells) are identified and selected (separated, or isolated) from those that do not.
