Political Reform in Indonesia After Soeharto Harold A. Crouch, 2010 Three decades of authoritarian rule in Indonesia came to a sudden end in 1998 The collapse of the Soeharto regime was accompanied by massive economic decline widespread rioting communal conflict and fears that the nation was approaching the brink of disintegration Although the fall of Soeharto opened the way towards democratization conditions were by no means propitious for political reform This book asks how political reform could proceed despite such unpromising circumstances It examines electoral and constitutional reform the decentralization of a highly centralized regime the gradual but incomplete withdrawal of the military from its deep political involvement the launching of an anti corruption campaign and the achievement of peace in two provinces that had been devastated by communal violence and regional rebellion of military reform in Indonesia after the fall of Suharto's New Order regime in 1998. The extent of Indonesia's progress in this area has been the subject of heated debate both in Indonesia and in Western capitals. Human rights organizations and critical academics on the one hand have argued that the reforms implemented so far have been largely superficial and that Indonesia's armed forces remain a highly problematic institution. Foreign proponents of military assistance to Indonesia on the other hand have asserted that the military has undergone radical change as evidenced by its complete extraction from political institutions. This study evaluates the state of military reform eight years after the end of authoritarian rule, pointing to both significant achievements and serious shortcomings. Although the armed forces in the new democratic polity no longer function as the backbone of a powerful centralist regime and have lost many of their previous privileges, the military has been able to protect its core institutional interests by successfully fending off demands to reform the territorial command structure. As the military's primary source of political influence and off-budget revenue, the persistence of the territorial system has ensured that the Indonesian armed forces have not been fully subordinated to democratic civilian control. This ambiguous transition outcome so far poses difficult challenges to domestic and foreign policymakers who have to find ways of effectively engaging with the military to drive the reform process forward. This is the twenty-third publication in the Policy Studies, a peer-reviewed East-West Center Washington series that presents scholarly analysis of key contemporary domestic and international political, economic, and strategic issues affecting Asia in a policy-relevant manner.

The Politics of Protection Rackets in Post-New Order Indonesia Ian Douglas Wilson, 2015-03-24. Gangs and militias have been a persistent feature of social and political life in Indonesia. During the authoritarian New Order regime, they constituted part of a vast network of sub-contracted coercion and social control on behalf of the state. Indonesia's subsequent democratisation has seen gangs adapt to and take advantage of the changed political context. New types of populist street-based organisations have emerged that combine predatory rent-seeking with claims of representing marginalised social and economic groups. Based on extensive fieldwork in Jakarta, this book provides a comprehensive analysis of the changing relationship between gangs, militias, and political power and authority in post-New Order Indonesia. It argues that gangs and militias have manufactured various types of legitimacy in consolidating localised territorial monopolies and protection economies. As mediators between the informal politics of the street and the world of formal politics, they have become often influential brokers in Indonesia's decentralised electoral democracy. More than mere criminal extortion, it is argued that the protection racket as a social relation of coercion and domination remains a salient feature of Indonesia's post-authoritarian political landscape. This ground-breaking study will be of interest to students and scholars of Indonesian and Southeast Asian politics, political violence, gangs, and urban politics.
