ARMSTRONG GUN.

In Fort Fisher our eyes found a splendid specimen of the Armstrong gun, weighing 25,730 pounds. Upon it was this inscription: "The W. C. Armstrong & Co., New-York-Texas, No. 15." This was quite evidently a present to the rebels from some prominent British gentleman, if not from the Government himself. Great care had been taken of it, and General Warren gave repeated orders that it was not to be fired except under the command of necessity. It had the appearance of having been recently arrived. The gun is mounted on a swiveling carriage, highly varnished. The whole piece is finished in the finest style. It was fired a very few times during the action. During the confusion attending the occupation of the works by the Union troops some mischievous persons made the mistake. The Armstrong guns are manufactured exclusively under the auspices of the British Government, and General Foxworth, in his official report, states this fact as if it were a conclusive proof that the British Government, or some one high in authority, had presented the gun to the Confederate Government.

BEFORE PETERSBURG.

The great military event of the week was the attempt made by the rebel iron-clads on the James to destroy the river post our obstruction on the night of January 25. There had been great war that General Lee was about to do something that would astonish the world. The design of this iron-clad raid was to build against us as it was previous to the vessels engaged. The blow was mainly directed against the army on the north side of the James. The rebel fleet, after passing our obstruction, was to surprise Fort Harrison; and it is likely that a raid on City Point was also in consideration. The object is thus stated by the Richmond Dispatch of January 25:—"The expedition of our iron-clads down the river had been designed to break the enemy's position bridges, and thus destroy his communications, and to take advantage of the uncertainty that he had withdrawn most of his naval force from the river, probably to Wilmington, leaving but a few iron-clads and some smaller vessels in the channel above Forts. There was also reason to suppose that the rebel fleet had been sent to a portion of his own obstructions." At night three iron-clads on the Richmond, Virginia, and Fredericksburg were engaged in the raid. There were accompanied by the Denmark, a small wooden gunboat, mounting one gun. This boat got aground, and was blown up, either by the enemy or by a shell from our batteries. To have passed the obstructions successfully, but this is uncertain. At least it is doubtful whether, even if they succeeded in passing these iron obstructions, they found it so easy to pass them. The rebels only claim that one iron-clad, the Fredricksburg, succeeded in getting through. The Virginia and the Richmond got
