Share In Death:

A Share in Death Deborah Crombie, 2003-08-26 A week's holiday in a luxurious Yorkshire time share is just what Scotland Yard's Superintendent Duncan Kincaid needs. But the discovery of a body floating in the whirlpool bath ends Kincaid's vacation before it's begun. One of his new acquaintances at Followdale House is dead; another is a killer. Despite a distinct lack of cooperation from the local constabulary, Kincaid's keen sense of duty won't allow him to ignore the heinous crime impelling him to send for his enthusiastic young assistant Sergeant Gemma James. But the stakes are raised dramatically when a second murder occurs and Kincaid and James find themselves in a determined hunt for a fiendish felon who enjoys homicide a bit too much.

A Share in Death Deborah Crombie, 1995 In this delightful new series Detective Superintendent Duncan Kincaid of Scotland Yard takes a holiday at his lovely Yorkshire time share. But before the stress of crime solving begins to disappear a body washes up in the whirlpool bath. Kincaid won't be able to relax until the killer is sent packing.

The Thought of Death and the Memory of War Marc Crépon, 2013-10-01 War lays bare death and our relation to it. And in the wars or more precisely the memories of war of the twentieth century images of the deaths of countless faceless or nameless others eclipse the singularity of each victim's death as well as the end of the world as such that each death signifies. Marc Crépon's The Thought of Death and the Memory of War is a call to resist such images in which death is no longer actual death since it happens to anonymous others and to seek instead a world in which mourning the other whose mortality we always already share points us toward a cosmopolitics. Crépon pursues this path toward a cosmopolitics of mourning through readings of works by Freud, Heidegger, Sartre, Patocka, Levinas, Derrida, and Ricœur and others. The movement among these writers Crépon shows marks a way through and against twentieth-century interpretation to argue that no war, genocide, or neglect of people is possible without suspending how one relates to the death of another human being. A history of a critical strain in contemporary thought, this book is as Rodolphe Gasché says in the Foreword a profound meditation on what constitutes evil and a rigorous and illuminating reflection on death, community, and world. The translation of this work received financial support from the French Ministry of Foreign Affairs.

Over Our Dead Bodies Kenneth McKenzie, Todd Harra, 2014 Funerals and all the things that accompany them are traditionally sombre, contemplative events in which the bereaved look to their undertaker to guide them through that most difficult of times. But just as life can be unpredictable, death can often throw up even more surprises. From a dysfunctional family who turn their mother's wake into a full-blown riot to funeral crashers looking for free meals, these accounts from actual undertakers will have you laughing.

thinking and gasping in disbelief Marketing Death Cheri Shun-ching Chan, 2012-03-22 How do companies sell life insurance in a country where death is a taboo subject In Marketing Death Cheri S C Chan explores both how and why the life insurance industry has managed to emerge in China a country with an entrenched cultural stigma against the very topic of death Drawing on extensive ethnographic fieldwork and engaging with current scholarship Chan explores the processes and micro politics by which foreign and domestic companies have negotiated local cultural resistance and created a market in spite of it In doing so she asks larger questions about how different societies view and value life and death what is meant by cultural values how they interact with a set of fragmented cultural tools to compellingly organize individuals practical daily lives and how the market is influenced by them Chan tells a story not just of the emergence of the Chinese life insurance industry but of the dynamic relationships between culture and markets local norms and foreign influences in one of the world s fastest growing economies Marketing Death is the first book to offer a sociological analysis of the emergence of a life insurance market outside of a European or American context Through in depth study of the expansion of an industry whose unique product gambling on one s own sudden death has always met with a measure of resistance but never more so than in China Chan provides a new lens for understanding how modern capitalist enterprises are diffused to regions with disparate cultural traditions
