English as a Lingua Franca in ASEAN Andy Kirkpatrick,2010-09-01 The lingua franca role of English coupled with its status as the official language of ASEAN has important implications for language policy and language education. These include the relationship between English, the respective national languages of ASEAN, and thousands of local languages. How can the demand for English be balanced against the need for people to acquire their national language and mother tongue? While many will also need a regional lingua franca, they are learning English as the first foreign language from primary school in all ASEAN countries. Might not this early introduction of English threaten local languages and children's ability to learn? Or can English be introduced and taught in such a way that it can complement local languages rather than replace them? The aim of this book is to explore questions such as these and then make recommendations on language policy and language education for regional policymakers. The book will be important for regional policymakers and language education professionals. It should also benefit language teachers, especially but by no means exclusively English language teachers. The book will be of interest to all who are interested in the development of English as an international language and the possible implications of this upon local languages and cultures.

Andy Kirkpatrick is chair professor of English as an international language at the Hong Kong Institute of Education and director of the Institute's Research Centre into Language Education and Acquisition in Multilingual Societies. His research interests include the development of regional varieties of English and the history of Chinese rhetoric. Much research has been carried out on varieties of English used in Southeast Asia, but how intelligible these varieties are to others and whether a shift towards an international standard variety occurs in interactions between people from the region has been much less discussed. This volume, which provides a comprehensive account of the roles and functions of English in ASEAN and gives a linguistic description of the English spoken in the region, followed by an approach to teaching English called the multilingual model, is therefore a welcome contribution to studies on English in Asia.

Polarized Light and Polarization Vision in Animal Sciences Gábor Horváth, 2014-10-30. This book covers advances made since the 2004 Springer volume Polarized Light in Animal Vision edited by Horváth and Varjú, but also provides reviews and synopses of some areas. Part I examines polarization sensitivity across many animal taxa, including vertebrates and invertebrates, and details both terrestrial and aquatic life. Part II is devoted to the description of polarized light in nature and explores how the physics of light must be taken into account when understanding how polarized light is detected by the visual system. This includes underwater polarization due to scattering, polarization patterns reflected from freshwater bodies, polarization characteristics of forest canopies, normal and anomalous polarization patterns of the sky, skylight polarization transmitted through Snell's window, and both linearly and circularly polarized signals produced by terrestrial and aquatic animals. This Part also examines polarized light pollution induced by anthropogenic factors such as reflection off asphalt surfaces, glass panes, car bodies, and other man-made structures that are now known to form ecological traps for polarotactic insects. Part III surveys some of the practical applications of polarization vision, including polarization-based traps for biting insects ground based polarimetric cloud detectors and an historical examination of the navigational abilities of Viking seafarers using the sky polarization compass The deterrent qualities of ungulate pelage to polarization sensitive biting insects is also examined in this section The Illustrated London News ,1887 Khosana ,2000 Polarization Vision and Environmental Polarized Light Gábor Horváth,2024-10-12 This new edition presents a state of the art exploration of polarized light and polarization vision Part I of the book examines polarization sensitivity across many animal taxa including invertebrates and vertebrates and it details both terrestrial and aquatic life Part II is devoted to the description of environmental polarization with implications to animal and human polarization vision This includes underwater polarization polarization signals sky polarimetric Viking navigation and astronomical polarization This part also examines polarized light pollution induced by anthropogenic factors such as reflection off asphalt surfaces glass panes car bodies and other man made structures that are now known to form ecological traps for polarotactic insects The new edition features a number of novelties including chapters on trilobites springtails bats seals imaging polarimetry and astronomical polarization
