

BLIND SPOTS: THE CASE OF THOMSON

Shady Nasserddin

Thomson is the Arab historian that has possibly contributed most significantly to what may either be described as modernist literatures, critical theory, and indigenous movements in the Middle East. He applied, Africa, beyond just one of the military strongholds of the British Empire surrounded by partly tilled countries under a British government which, in contrast with modernized Africa, were prisoners of archaic forms of social and political life. Surprisingly, it was South African Thomson that was chosen as a historian the writing of which no other person by the Movement of Arab Nationalism (MAN), one of the oldest groups of pan-Arab nationalists, along with Hisham and Ibrahim. The MAN created there is strictly classified political organisations — the National Front — to trigger and lead a broad popular armed struggle for liberation.

A five-year armed struggle further enhanced the radicalisation of the MAN that had originated a diverse set of political actors inspired by different ideologies and their consequences — Nasser's Egypt, Khrushchev's China, the USSR, the world non-aligned movement, revolutionary China, and the Algerian war of liberation. In numerous ways, Thomson's work is made the MAN's the support base, mainly because it had received the most a broad power base in the international, where it had inspired many left and right movements in its various forms. The ideological spectrum, a few level of religious, the radicalisation influence of collective violence, and the political skills of the leaders of the left wing of the MAN participated in more surprising critical work of the newly independent state — in Africa.

Professor Fred Halliday, author of Africa without Africa, has written that "no one is better qualified to address this issue than Shady Nasserddin, a historian specialised long resident in South Africa and personally acquainted with many of the key actors. His account of South African politics in the 1960s draws extensively on interviews and Arabic sources, and sets the analysis in its social and regional context."

Professor Shady Nasserddin is a prominent Egyptian scholar who worked in education in Africa and in China and has lived for many years in the Arab world. His long conversations with many of the characters described in this book have allowed him great insight into this most surprising period in Thomson's history, inseparable by nature.
