A Century of Sermons Upon Several Remarkable Subjects John Hackett, 1675 Technology, Self-Fashioning and Politeness in Eighteenth-Century Britain A. Withey, 2015-12-03 The second half of the eighteenth century brought important changes in attitudes towards shaping the body New expectations of polite conduct deportment and demeanour were projected onto the body with emphasis laid upon neatness elegance and a natural body shape Deformities were to be concealed whilst bodily surfaces were managed to convey a harmonious whole A large number of technologies of the body were involved in this process including wooden legs elastic trusses and even wigs But the introduction of a new type of steel cast steel around 1750 offered new material possibilities for shaping the body The physical properties of steel transformed the design and function of many instruments from postural devices to spectacles and even the smallest daily items of toilette By no means was steel the only material involved in transforming the body Neither did it simply sweep away all that had gone before But as an enlightened metal cast steel was a key material in the refinement of the body

Buttrey, Ian McPhee, 1998-01-29 Coins for reasons that do not always make sense are often treated by field excavators as more reliable chronological indexes than other classes of artifacts This always makes their discovery a welcome event especially when they are silver or gold which tend to survive in the ground in a more recognizable state than their bronze counterparts The Red Figure pottery does not have quite the same chronological relevance as the coins but does on occasion contribute to the dating of archaeological contexts Its often high quality and interesting variety of shapes has already generated commentary elsewhere in addition to what is presented here University Museum Monograph 97
