

ENVIRONMENT AND NEGOTIATION

The conflict is the field for the negotiation's intervention

- 💡 it does not analyse the causes of the conflicts, but it focuses on solution (negotiated)
- 💡 it works less about violent conflicts and more on disputes and controversies
- 💡 the community is mature and structured with academic institutions deputed to the preparation of the negotiation professionals

Negotiated Development A Breakthrough In Environmental Controversies:

Negotiated Development Malcolm D. Rivkin, 1977

Resolving Development Disputes Through Negotiations

Timothy J. Sullivan, 2012-12-06 In the last decade disputes between developers and local communities over proposed construction projects have led to increasing litigation. Environmental legislation in particular has greatly enhanced the rights and powers of organized groups that desire to participate in local development decisions. These powers have allowed citizen groups to block undesired and socially unacceptable projects such as highways through urban areas and sprawling suburban developments. At the same time these powers have produced a collective inability to construct many needed projects that produce adverse local impacts. Prisons, airports, hospitals, waste treatment plants and energy facilities all face years of litigation before a final decision. At times prolonged litigation has produced especially high costs to all participants. Despite these new powers, citizen action has often been limited to participation in public hearings or adjudicatory proceedings. Typically this occurs so late in the decision process that citizen input has very little effect in shaping a project's design. Those who dislike some element of a project often have little choice other than to oppose the entire project through litigation.

Environmental Dispute Resolution Lawrence S. Bacow, Michael Wheeler, 2013-06-29 This book has its origins in an MIT research project that was funded by the U.S. Environmental Protection Agency (EPA). Our immediate objective was to prepare a set of case studies that examined bargaining and negotiation as they occurred between government environmental advocates and regulatees throughout the traditional regulatory process. The project was part of a larger effort by the EPA to make environmental regulation more efficient and less litigious. The principal investigator for the research effort was Lawrence Susskind of the Department of Urban Studies and Planning. Eight case studies were prepared under the joint supervision of Susskind and the authors of this book. Studying the negotiating behavior of parties as we worked our way through an environmental dispute proved enlightening. We observed missed opportunities for settlement, negotiating tactics that backfired, and strategies that appeared to be grounded more in intuition than in thoughtful analysis. At the same time, however, we were struck by how often the parties ultimately managed to muddle through. People negotiated not out of some idealistic commitment to consensus but because they thought it better served their own interests. When some negotiations reached an impasse, people improvised mediation. These disputants succeeded in spite of legal and institutional barriers, even though few of them had a sophisticated understanding of negotiation.

Foundations of Dispute Resolution Carrie Menkel-Meadow, 2017-05-15 This volume brings together leading research articles in the theory, research findings, and applications of modern dispute resolution. The articles relate to a wide variety of settings and cover the primary processes of negotiation, mediation, and arbitration, as well as exploring combinations and hybridization of those processes. Also included are articles on the search for value added or pie-expanding creative solutions, the choosing of strategies based on game theory, economics, and social and cognitive psychology, how foundational theories have been altered or modified depending on contexts and numbers of parties and issues and what issues are raised by the privatization of justice The articles span both the science and art of dispute resolution consider the relationship of peace to justice and include both empirical descriptive and normative prescriptive assessments of how these processes of dispute resolution function L' Avenir Du Droit
