Nutrition and Diet Therapy in Gastrointestinal Disease Martin H. Floch,2013-11-21 A physician with a broad consultative practice Dr Floch combines his clinical experience with a zeal for exploring what has been written by others Chief of Medicine at the Norwalk Hospital for the past decade and still an active consulting gastroenterologist Dr Floch has given us a volume which every clinician dealing with digestive disorders will want to have at his or her desk Not everyone will agree with all that Dr Floch has prescribed in the way of detailed dietary help for the common afflictions of mankind's gut but in this book the reader can get at the background of the controversy All clinicians have had problems in assessing when to use elemental diets how to apply advances in peripheral and intravenous alimentation and in many other matters which are discussed in detail in this fine volume Dr Floch displays what is available in dietary therapy evaluates the nutritional inadequacies surrounding most digestive disturbances and calmly evaluates competing claims He gives a brief overview of gastrointestinal physiology pertaining to an understanding of nutritional complications as well as the genesis of the major gastrointestinal disorders In this sense his book can be read as a mini physiological text I am delighted to have this book in our gastrointestinal series and I hope that the reader will profit from it as much as I have Aspects of Nutritional

Physiology G. H. Bourne,1988-06-07 World Review of Nutrition and Dietetics G. H. Bourne,1974-05-06 Nutritional Improvement of Food and Feed Proteins Mendel Friedman,2013-03-09 The nutritional quality of a protein depends on the proportion of its amino acids especially the essential amino acids their physiological availability and the specific requirements of the consumer Availability varies and depends on protein source interaction with other dietary components and the consumer's age and physiological state In many foods especially those from plants low levels of various essential amino acids limits their nutritive value This is particularly important for cereals which may be inadequate in the essential amino acids isoleucine lysine threonine and tryptophan and legumes which are often poor sources of methionine Moreover these commodities are principle sources of protein for much of the earth's rapidly growing population At the current annual growth rate of about 2 percent the world population of about 4 billion will increase to 6.5 billion by the year 2000 and to 17 billion by the year 2050 Five hundred million people are presently estimated to suffer protein malnutrition with about fifteen thousand daily deaths The ratio of malnourished to adequately nourished will almost surely increase For these reasons and especially in view of the limited availability of high quality largely animal protein to feed present and future populations improvement of food and feed quality is especially important
