Metropolitan City Expenditures Roy W. Bahl, 2014-07-15 In this study of the structure of core city expenditures Mr Bahl analyzes the functional relationship between per capita expenditures and selected economic demographic and sociological factors He finds that the problems central to intercity variations in per capita spending are directly related to the coordination of fiscal and physical planning and that economic and social areas not corporate boundaries represent the most appropriate planning units Mr Bahl extends the static analysis of the pioneering work of Harvey Brazer to a comparative static and temporal context comparing through regression techniques the factors underlying per capita variations in 198 Standard Metropolitan Statistical Area cities from 1950 to 1960 His results suggest that the different levels may be primarily attributed to interactions between the central city and the urban fringe and to disparities in the dependence on inter government revenues

West Bengal viz Kolkata Municipal Corporation KMC The choice of city corporations was based on the shared history and the similarity of heritage culture topography and socio economic conditions Both DNCC and DSCC as well as the KMC have a high population density which puts immense pressure on the service delivery provided by these corporations of basic services such as water supply sanitation facilities street lighting drainage and sewerage and waste disposal This is compounded by poor fiscal health of the ULBs Using primary data collected through surveys and personal interviews and information obtained from official documents the book estimates fiscal gaps of the ULBs and undertakes simple simulations to estimate potential revenue enhancements and expenditure requirements to deliver services at the internationally acceptable standards It highlights under exploited sources of revenue which can be better realized and also identifies untapped revenue sources that can be easily introduced in order to significantly enhance city revenues The book is an excellent resource not only for researchers studying this topic but also for policy makers and urban planners particularly those from developing countries having to deal with burgeoning cities with high migrant population density Atlanta Economic Review ,1968
