Ainley,Margaret Batten,Hilary Miller,1984 This monograph reports on a study of differences between school in retention rates in the government high schools of Victoria It involves analysis of official data for all high schools and both qualitative and quantitative studies in a sample of 16 schools The study suggests that curriculum and organisational features of schools can effect retention rates beyond the influence of the environment in which the school is located Children's Lifeworlds in a Global City: Melbourne Clare Bartholomaeus,Nicola Yelland,2023-05-05 This book examines the connections between policy school experiences and everyday activities of children growing up in the global city of Melbourne Australia It provides an in depth consideration of Melbourne primary school children s lifeworlds exploring everyday stories and practices inside and outside of school This includes consideration of the diverse ways that educational success may be understood in the context of Melbourne productively moving beyond a narrow focus only on academic achievement. Situated alongside policy and curriculum analysis, the book draws on research in Melbourne Year 4 primary school classrooms in the form of student completed surveys, classroom ethnographies, and student responses to a learning dialogues activity, as well as video re-enactments of out of school life. Through this, it explores key aspects of children's lifeworlds with a focus on school timetabling and pedagogical encounters, school engagement and belonging, and activities and everyday routines outside of school. This book offers a comprehensive and holistic exploration of children's lifeworlds in Melbourne, drawing connections between children's lives inside and outside of school and the broader policy contexts.

The Lean Education Manifesto Arran Hamilton, John Hattie, 2022-03-30

The global expansion of education is one of the greatest successes of the modern era. More children have access to schooling and leave with higher levels of learning than at any time in history. However, 250 million children in developing countries are still not in school, and 600 million attend but get little out of it, a situation further exacerbated by the dislocations from COVID-19. In a context where education funding is stagnating and even declining, Arran Hamilton and John Hattie suggest that we need to start thinking Lean and explicitly look for ways of unlocking more from less. Drawing on data from 900 systematic reviews of 53,000 research studies from the perspective of efficiency of impact, they controversially suggest that for low and middle income countries, maybe pre-service initial teacher training programs could be significantly shortened and perhaps even stopped. Maybe teachers need not have degree-level qualifications in the subjects they teach, and they might not really need degrees at all. Maybe the hours per week and years of schooling that each child receives could be significantly reduced, or at least not increased. Maybe learners can be taught more effectively and less resource intensively in mixed-age classrooms with peers tutoring one another. Maybe different approaches to curriculum instruction and the length of the school day might be more cost-effective ways of driving up student achievement than hiring extra teachers, reducing class sizes, or building more classrooms. Maybe school-based management, public-private partnerships, and performance-related pay are blind and expensive alleys that have limited influence or impact on what teachers actually do in classrooms. This groundbreaking and thought-provoking work also identifies a range of initiatives that are worth starting. It introduces the Learning to GOLOD methodology to support school and system leaders in selecting, implementing, and scaling those high-probability initiatives and to rigorously de-implement those to be stopped. It is essential reading for anyone with an interest in education.
