health promotion; occupational therapy; public health

Health promotion has been described as “the process of enabling people to increase control over, and to improve, their health” (WHO, 1986). It is one of the five intervention approaches of the Occupational Therapy Practice Framework (American Occupational Therapy Association [AOTA], 2002, 2008). As early as the 1970s, there were calls for occupational therapy to become active in health promotion (Brunyane Weimer, 1972). More recently, the American Occupational Therapy Association (AOTA) articulated a role for occupational therapists in health promotion (AOTA Commission on Practice, 2001), charging practitioners to promote health and wellness in both individuals and communities through engagement in human occupation to promote healthy lifestyles. Although occupational therapy practice traditionally focuses on individuals, to evaluate the impact of occupational therapy health promotion programs, the profession will need to assume a greater public health focus.

This article presents the thesis that a public health focus is needed to facilitate wider adoption of health promotion practices in the profession. Occupational therapy for people with arthritis is used to illustrate health promotion, using a public health focus. This population was selected because arthritis is a leading cause of disability in U.S. adults (McNeil & Binette, 2001) and dramatic advances in the rheumatologic care over the past decade are fundamentally changing the clinical course of arthritis. Today, people with arthritis are diagnosed early and treated

Ankylosing Spondylitis J. Calabro,G. Dick,2012-12-06 Ankylosing spondylitis the third most common form of chronic arthritis is a systemic rheumatic disorder characterized by inflammation of the axial skeleton spine and sacroiliac joints and a host of systemic manifestations With comprehensive care the vast majority of patients can lead full productive lives However management can succeed only with patient education and exercise Recent communication from my co editor Carson Dick serves to remind me that there are several unresolved issues concerning drug therapy in ankylosing spondylitis Clearly in spite of my views there are others who do not believe that the non steroidal anti inflammatory drugs NSAIDs alter favorably the course of disease and they must be administered for prolonged periods and in anti inflammatory quantities to be effective I would agree with Carson Dick that aspirin and phenylbutazone are way down the list of drug priorities following the marketing of other NSAIDs that are effective and safer I am grateful to my contributors to this volume all recognized authorities on their particular topic It has been a privilege collaborating with them on this particular volume
