Knowledge Policy and Practice in Teacher Education reviews the evolution of education policy on initial teacher education as an indicator of the knowledge that is considered important for nation building. It also looks at research on approaches and structures to initial teacher learning as an indication of the intellectual and moral direction to which schooling must aspire. Contributors look at these dynamics across a range of societies including Australia, the Czech Republic, England, Finland, Hong Kong, Israel, Italy, Japan, South Korea, Mexico, Russia, and the USA. Using a review of the literature approach within a comparative framework, the book seeks to answer the following questions for each country: What has been the evolution of different approaches to learning to teach in each setting and what factors have influenced change over the years? What are the underlying theories that characterize past and current thinking about the knowledge, skills, and dispositions needed by teachers and what evidence is used to support these theories? What does a review on the state of the knowledge about teacher education over the past 30 years reveal about the evolution of the research and knowledge traditions that have supported current and past innovations in teacher education? Maria Teresa Tatto and Ian Menter explore international variability in different conceptions of knowledge in the context of learning to teach and explore the way in which national and international influences interact in the developing trajectories of teacher education policy and practice, considering what knowledge is considered important for teachers to have.

Faculty Development in the Age of Evidence Andrea L. Beach, Mary Deane Sorcinelli, Ann E. Austin, Jaclyn K. Rivard, 2023-07-03

The first decade of the 21st century brought major challenges to higher education, all of which have implications for and impact the future of faculty professional development. This volume provides the field with an important snapshot of faculty development structures, priorities, and practices in a period of change and uses the collective wisdom of those engaged with teaching, learning, and faculty development centers and programs to identify important new directions for practice. Building on their previous study of a decade ago published under the title of Creating the Future of Faculty Development, the authors explore questions of professional preparation and pathways, programmatic priorities, collaboration, and assessment. Since the publication of this earlier study, the pressures on faculty development have only escalated: demands for greater accountability from regional and disciplinary accreditors, fiscal constraints, increasing diversity in types of faculty appointments, and expansion of new technologies for research and teaching. Centers have been asked to address a wider range of institutional issues and priorities based on these challenges. How have they responded and what strategies should centers be considering? These are the questions this book addresses. For this new study, the authors re-surveyed faculty developers on perceived priorities for the field as well as practices and services offered. They also examined more deeply than the earlier study the organization of faculty development including characteristics of directors operating budgets and staffing levels of centers and patterns of collaboration re organization and consolidation In doing so they elicited information on centers signature programs and the ways that they assess the impact of their programs on teaching and learning and other key outcomes What emerges from the findings are what the authors term a new Age of Evidence influenced by heightened stakeholder interest in the outcomes of undergraduate education and characterized by a focus on assessing the impact of instruction on student learning of academic programs on student success and of faculty development in institutional mission priorities Faculty developers are responding to institutional needs for assessment at the same time as they are being asked to address a wider range of institutional priorities in areas such as blended and online teaching diversity and the scale up of evidence based practices They face the need to broaden their audiences and address the needs of part time non tenure track and graduate student instructors as well as of pre tenure and post tenure faculty They are also feeling increased pressure to demonstrate the return on investment of their programs This book describes how these faculty development and institutional needs and priorities are being addressed through linkages collaborations and networks across institutional units and highlights the increasing role of faculty development professionals as organizational change agents at the department and institutional levels serving as experts on the needs of faculty in larger organizational discussions
