

Land reform and farm sector restructuring in the former Soviet Union and Russia

CSABA CSAKI AND ZVI LERMAN

I. Introduction

Soviet agriculture has gone through a series of reforms during the years of its existence, all aimed at improving the productivity and efficiency of collective and state farming. The recent changes in the former Soviet Union and Russia have focused again the attention on the need for agricultural reforms, this time reforms that will be consistent with the development of a market-based economy and integration of Russian food production into the world food system.

This paper surveys the process of agricultural land reform, the restructuring of kolkhozes and sovkhozes, and the emergence of individual farming and agricultural cooperatives in the former Soviet Union as represented primarily by Russia, its largest component. Land reform and the restructuring of the Russian agricultural sector cannot be separated from the process of transition to a market economy and nation-wide privatization; reform in agriculture must be synchronized and made consistent with the general process of privatization in other sectors of the economy. Land reform and general restructuring of the agricultural sector can succeed only if the minimum conditions of an operating market for agricultural products and inputs exist. In addition to development of infrastructure facilities and distribution channels, these minimum conditions also include decontrol of farm and retail prices, reduction of subsidies, creation of financial services, and eventual abolition of direct state intervention in agricultural production and food markets.

II. Initial Conditions: Main Features of the Agricultural System

A. Soviet Land and Farming Policies

State ownership of land has been the foundation of the Soviet administrative command system in agriculture for over seven decades. Within days of the accession of the Bolsheviks to power in October 1917, land was nationalized and land distribution was decreed. Autarky and industrialization goals motivated the state to strive for full control over food production, food distribution, and the use of agricultural products, while maintaining generally low prices and wages.

Collectivization of agricultural production was promoted as a means of achieving central management (it also, of course, ensured political control). While 97% of all agricultural land was farmed individually between 1917 and 1928, rapid collectivization after 1928 virtually eliminated individual farming; by 1940, 97% of all farms were worked collectively. The only remnants of individual farming were the small household plots that collective farm members were allowed near their dwellings for "individual subsidiary farming".
