Mahoney,1994 Critical history of classic 19th century German Romantic novel Since its posthumous publication in 1892 German French British and American critics have regarded the novel Heinrich von Ofterdingen by Friedrich von Hardenberg Novalis as the epitome of German Romanticism A critical history of Heinrich von Ofterdingen thus provides an exemplary opportunity to analyze changing patterns of German and international literary criticism over the past two hundred years particularly with respect to the changing definitions of Romanticism Critical response to the Klingsohr tale in the novel is a constant point of reference in this study providing a record of successive approaches to the work Novalis and Mathematics Martin Dyck,1960

Porterfield, 1914 "The Space of Words" Jennifer Miller Hoyer, 2014 Nelly Sachs 1891-1970 has long been regarded as one of the most significant Holocaust poets. Her conception of language and words as a landscape has been understood by scholars and critics as an exilic ersatz Heimat for the lost German homeland of a displaced poet. This reading, however, is based entirely on her postwar poems. Such an isolated approach to her complex body of work is increasingly historically problematic; it is also at odds with Sachs's generally cyclical poetic process. In The Space of Words, Jennifer Hoyer offers the first sustained critical analysis of Sachs's largely unanalyzed prewar poetry and prose, as well as the first analysis that examines structural and thematic ties between the prewar works and the Nobel Prize-winning postwar poetry. Through close readings of both Sachs's prewar and postwar works, Hoyer reveals a diasporic rather than exilic conception of the landscape of language: a position of constant wandering rather than static longing for return. This diasporic poetics promotes the intellectual and linguistic power of the wanderer and opens new insights into Sachs's essential significance as a Holocaust poet and a twentieth-century German Jewish writer wary of the link of literary language to geopolitics and the narrative of nations. Jennifer M. Hoyer is Assistant Professor of German at the University of Arkansas.

Forces of Nature Adrian Renner, Frederike Middelhoff, 2022-09-06 By the end of the 18th century, notions of forces of nature (Naturkräfte) were increasingly discussed across disciplinary bounds: attraction and repulsion, vital forces and electric fluids, formative drives and biological organisms were examined as forces linked to natural processes. German Romantic literature, science, and philosophy from Schelling and Novalis to Goethe and Hegel pondered interrelated notions of forces considered as dynamic and continually active in nature, forces which in turn also appeared to shape human actions, social structures, and cultural developments. This volume explores the points of reference for approaches to and afterlives of Romantic conceptions and representations of natural forces at the intersection of natural sciences and cultural imaginaries.

The Vegetative Soul Elaine P. Miller, 2012-02-01 The Vegetative Soul demonstrates that one significant resource for the postmodern critique of subjectivity can be found in German Idealism and Romanticism, specifically in the philosophy of nature. Miller demonstrates that the perception of German Idealism and Romanticism as the culmination of the philosophy of the subject overlooks the nineteenth-century critique of subjectivity with reference to the natural world. This book's contribution is its articulation of a plant-like subjectivity. The vision of the human being as plant combats the now familiar conception of the modern subject as atomistic, autonomous, and characterized primarily by its separability and freedom from nature. Reading Kant, Goethe, Hegel, and Nietzsche, Miller juxtaposes two strands of nineteenth-century German thought, comparing the more familiar animal understanding of individuation and subjectivity to an alternative plantlike one that emphasizes interdependence, vulnerability, and metamorphosis. While providing the necessary historical context, the book also addresses a question that has been very important for recent feminist theory, especially French feminism: namely, the question of the possible configuration of a feminine subject The idea of the vegetative subject takes the traditional alignment of the feminine with nature and the earth and subverts and transforms it into a positive possibility Although the roots of this alternative conception of subjectivity can be found in Kant's third Critique and its legacy in nineteenth century Naturphilosophie the work of Luce Irigaray brings it to fruition

God & the Gothic Alison Milbank, 2018-11-10 God and the Gothic Romance and Reality in the English Literary Tradition provides a complete reimagining of the Gothic literary canon to examine its engagement with theological ideas tracing its origins to the apocalyptic critique of the Reformation female martyrs and to the Dissolution of the monasteries now seen as usurping authorities A double gesture of repudiation and regret is evident in the consequent search for political aesthetic and religious mediation which characterizes the aftermath of the Glorious Revolution and Whig Providential discourse Part one interprets eighteenth century Gothic novels in terms of this Whig debate about the true heir culminating in Ann Radcliffe's melancholic theology which uses distance and loss to enable a new mediation Part two traces the origins of the doppelgänger in Calvinist anthropology and establishes that its employment by a range of Scottish writers offers a productive mode of subjectivity necessary in a culture equally concerned with historical continuity In part three Irish
