

New Capacities (cont'd)

- A decreasing emphasis on leaders and an increasing prominence of multi-stakeholder, shared governance regimes that favour effective stewardship;
- An increasing number and frequency of self-organizing groups that operate at scales from local to multi-national to global, and where the participants may be willing to resolve their issues without necessarily having to involve national governments;
- Creating a generation of global citizens who are willing to assume ownership of their lives and contribute to making a collective difference by sharing with others;
- Emphasizing the direct participation of citizens in: the formation of national and international policies; in service delivery; in monitoring and accountability; and in ways that are ongoing; and
- A new model of global governance that focuses on a future that all of humanity is prepared to live into, & not just trying to address past grievances or current wrongdoings

Reimagining The Future Towards Democratic Governance A Report Of The Global Governance Reform Project:

Reimagining the Future Joseph A. Camilleri, Global Governance Reform Project, 2000 Proposals Part I Democratizing global governance Part 2 Governance of global financial flows Part 3 Global peace and security Reforming UN Decision-Making Procedures Martin Daniel Niemetz, 2015-03-24 The institutional procedures for the UN's decision making on issues of global peace and security first and foremost the Security Council SC were conceived with the objective of enabling a swift but internationally coordinated response to irregular situations of crises Today however the UN is constantly involved in situations of conflict and has expanded its range of activities This book offers a concrete and practically applicable answer to the question of how to reform the UN and increase the legitimacy of the UN's decision making procedures on issues of global peace and security In order to provide this answer it connects the minutia of institutional design with the abstract principals of democratic theory in a systematic and reproducible method thereby enabling a clear normative evaluation of even the smallest technical detail of reform This evaluation demonstrates that there is a range of feasible proposals for reform that could improve the SC's accountability both to the General Assembly and to the general public that could increase the opportunities for effective input from the UN membership and NGOs This book will be of interest to students and scholars of the United Nations International Organizations and regional governance Reimagining the Future Joseph A. Trent, 2007-06-20 This book contends that civil society must mobilize its capacities to bring a new will to national and international politics and oblige governments to act It starts by demonstrating the need for institutional change at the UN and then shows how both in the past and the present leading individuals and nongovernmental organizations using their knowledge base and their organizational networks have lead the fight for international organizations After a summary of major UN reform proposals over the years the book concludes by identifying leading global reformers and elaborating a detailed plan for a global reform movement to spearhead the modernization of the UN system Democratizing Global Governance E. Aksu, J. Camilleri, 2002-07-15 Is globalization beyond human control In this thought provoking text the myths and mantras of this apparently irresistible force are challenged and dissembled By examining a number of fundamental questions the contributors put forward a radical reform agenda for global governance Can the global multilateral system be democratic Are security and economic concerns
