Age Factor in Second Language Acquisition David Michael Singleton, Zolt Lengyel, 1995-01-01 This book takes a hard look at some of the assumptions that are customarily made concerning the role of age in second language acquisition The evidence and arguments the contributors present run counter to the notion that an early start in second language learning is of itself either absolutely sufficient or necessary for the attainment of native like mastery of a second language Another theme of the book is a doubt that there is a particular stage of maturity beyond which language learning is no longer fully possible In short the book presents a challenge to those who take it as given that second language learning is inevitably different in its essential nature from language acquisition in the childhood years and that second language knowledge acquired beyond the critical period is in all circumstances and in all respects doomed to fossilize at a non native like level Learning Strategies

Second Language Task Complexity Peter

Robinson, 2011-09-13 Understanding how task complexity affects second language learning interaction and spoken and written performance is essential to informed decisions about task design and sequencing in TBLT programs. The chapters in this volume all examine evidence for claims of the Cognition Hypothesis that complex tasks should promote greater accuracy and complexity of speech and writing as well as more interaction and learning of information provided in the input to task performance than simpler tasks. Implications are drawn concerning the basic pedagogic claim of the Cognition Hypothesis that tasks should be sequenced for learners from simple to complex during syllabus design. Containing theoretical discussion of the Cognition Hypothesis and cutting edge empirical studies of the effects of task complexity on second language learning and performance, this book will be important reading for language teachers, graduate students and researchers in applied linguistics, second language acquisition and cognitive and educational psychology.
