Good News for Bears?

Thousands of grizzly bears once roamed the western U.S. But in the 1800s, settlers began building homes and farms on the land where the bears lived. Grizzlies had less room to roam. Out of fear, settlers also hunted the bears.

Yellowstone National Park is in Wyoming and parts of Montana and Idaho. It became one of the few places in the U.S. with a grizzly bear population. By 1975, only 136 grizzlies were left there.

That's when the U.S. government added the bears to its list of protected animals. Being on the list meant that people could no longer hunt them or harm their habitat. Now, about 700 grizzlies live in and around Yellowstone.

Then, in 2017, the government decided to take Yellowstone's grizzlies off the list of protected animals. Not everyone was happy. Some wildlife groups, like the Sierra Club, took the government to court. They wanted the government to change its decision.

It could take years for the courts to decide whether the grizzlies should be back on the list. Until then, Bonnie Rice of the Sierra Club hopes that the government keeps a close eye on the bears.

Use the chart below to find the cause-and-effect relationships in the article.

Cause

(why something happens)

Grizzly bears weren't on the list of endangered species

Effect

(what happens as a result)

The number of grizzly bears in and around Yellowstone National Park has grown
