report characterized a common understanding of the civil rights movement in two names and four words Martin Luther King Jr Rosa Parks and I have a dream Seeking to better understand her hometown s complicated history its connection to other stories of oppression and resistance and her own place in relation to it Armstrong embarked on a journey to unravel the standard Birmingham narrative to see what she would find instead Beginning at the center with her family s arrival in 1947 in a neighborhood near the color line within earshot of what would become known as Dynamite Hill Armstrong works her way out in time and across the map Pulling at strings and weaving in the personal stories of her white working class family classmates and other local characters not traditionally associated with Birmingham s civil rights history she expands the cast and forges connections between the stories that have been told about Birmingham as well as those that haven t From a funny cousin whose closeted community was also targeted by Bull Connor s police force to an aunt who served on the jury that finally convicted Robert Chambliss of murdering Denise McNair Armstrong combines intimate personal stories archival research and cultural geography to reframe the lessons of Birmingham through the intersections of race class gender faith education culture place and mobility The result is more than a pageant of Birmingham and its people it s also a portrait of Birmingham rendered on the ground over time as seen in old plantations in segregated neighborhoods across contested boundary lines over mountains along increasingly polluted waterways under the gaze of Vulcan beneath airport runways on the highways cutting through and running out of town In her search for truth and beauty in the veins of Birmingham Armstrong draws on the powers of place and storytelling to dig into the cracks complicating the easy narrative of Black triumph and overcoming Among other discoveries found in the mirror Armstrong finds a white America that for too long has failed to recognize itself in the horrific stories and symbols from Birmingham s past or accept the continuing inequalities from which it unfairly benefits A literary scholar Armstrong observes that many of the best writings on civil rights and race relations describe racism as a wound a poison or a sickness without offering easy prescriptions Citing James Baldwin Armstrong knows stories have the power to touch the human heart but warns that resistance to injustice only begins there Once engaged it is up to each of us to look again and consider what our stories really reveal about the world and ourselves In Learning From Birmingham Armstrong reminds us that the stories of civil rights structural oppression privilege whether intentional or unconscious abuse and inequity are difficult and complicated but that their telling especially from multiple stakeholder perspectives is absolutely necessary School Days ,1989
