The chapters shuttle between a variety of aesthetic and philosophical concerns from theology and Biblical interpretation to colonialism hermeneutics phenomenology worlding posthumanism and speculative realism These varied approaches are united by a single aporetic thread efforts to surmount the problem of human access invariably risk repeating ever more blindly the violence and immorality of anthropocentrism We seem trapped in the cul de sac of the Anthropocene To discover potential new exits the contributors consider whether it is possible or advisable to abandon so called correlationism of art of literature of technology If it is then how If not how might we more ethically reembrace our innately corruptive relations with a world of non human others How might we free nature finally from the demands of human action and human thought without mendaciously reinscribing humanity s distance from it or denying a proximity that is only traversable by artificial means Race, and Mourning in American Modernism Greg Forter, 2011-04-14 American modernist writers engagement with changing ideas of gender and race often took the form of a struggle against increasingly inflexible categories Greg Forter interprets modernism as an effort to mourn a form of white manhood that fused the masculine with the feminine He argues that modernists were engaged in a poignant yet deeply conflicted effort to hold on to socially feminine and racially marked aspects of identity qualities that the new social order encouraged them to disparage Examining works by F Scott Fitzgerald Ernest Hemingway William Faulkner and Willa Cather Forter shows how these writers shared an ambivalence toward the feminine and an unease over existing racial categories that made it difficult for them to work through the loss of the masculinity they mourned Gender Race and Mourning in American Modernism offers a bold reading of canonical modernism Married But Available B.
