Lost and Found in Translation Martha J. Cutter,2006-05-18 Starting with Salman Rushdie's assertion that even though something is always lost in translation something can always be gained Martha Cutter examines the trope of translation in twenty English language novels and autobiographies by contemporary ethnic American writers She argues that these works advocate a politics of language diversity a literary and social agenda that validates the multiplicity of ethnic cultures and tongues in the United States Cutter studies works by Asian American Native American African American and Mexican American authors She argues that translation between cultures languages and dialects creates a new language that in its diversity constitutes the true heritage of the United States Through the metaphor of translation Cutter demonstrates writers such as Maxine Hong Kingston

Sherman Alexie Toni Morrison and Richard Rodriguez establish a place within American society for the many languages spoken by multiethnic and multicultural individuals Cutter concludes with an analysis of contemporary debates over language policy such as English only legislation the recognition of Ebonics and the growing acceptance of bilingualism The focus on translation by so many multiethnic writers she contends offers hope in our postmodern culture for a new condition in which creatively fused languages renovate the communications of the dominant society and create new kinds of identity for multicultural individuals

Latin Elegy and the Space of Empire Sara H. Lindheim, 2021-03-11 In a time of aggressive imperial expansion Latin elegists expressed geographical concerns about boundaries and limits through masculine and feminine subjects in their poetry Latin Elegy and the Space of Empire argues that the subject in Latin elegy beginning with Catallus constitutes itself in relation to the dynamic space of empire from the late Republic to the end of the Augustan age The lack of fixity in the elegiac subject and space of empire go hand in hand and in imagining geographical space the question of our very nature as subjects comes to the fore Catullus Propertius Tibullus and Ovid each offers his own unique expression of the gendered subject and their poetry runs the gamut of responses to the expanding geographical empire First comes the dream of Roman imperium sine fine an empire that capaciously stretches to the ends of the inhabited world And yet imperium sine fine requires the existence of some sort of fines even if the fantasy demands that they be overrun Formlessness or worse rapidly alternating forms gives rise to anxieties and the desire to set down some fines to establish where exactly the boundaries of empire are what belongs inside and what can be relegated to outside But fines cartographically speaking are never as stable as we want them to be and for a rapidly expanding empire are always under pressure The very constitution of the gendered elegiac subject mirrors anticipates runs parallel to the problems and anxieties that the map of expanding empire both tries to solve yet simultaneously reveals in its production of space
