Negative stereotypes of African Americans have long been disseminated through the visual arts. This original and incisive study examines how black writers use visual tropes as literary devices to challenge readers' conceptions of black identity. Lena Hill charts two hundred years of African American literary history from Phillis Wheatley to Ralph Ellison and engages with a variety of canonical and lesser-known writers. Chapters interweave literary history, museum culture, and visual analysis of numerous illustrations with close readings of Booker T. Washington, Gwendolyn Bennett, Zora Neale Hurston, Melvin Tolson, and others. Together, these sections register the degree to which African American writers rely on vision, its modes, consequences, and insights to demonstrate black intellectual and cultural sophistication. Hill's provocative study will interest scholars and students of African American literature and American literature more broadly.

A Wolverine Lumberjack. Mason Ray, 2015-07-22. Life in the northwest wilderness of Michigan during the lumberjack era makes an exciting and engaging story, and who better to tell it than someone who actually lived there during this time. Mason Ray was a citizen in Leelanau County, Michigan, from 1880 until 1922. She knew stalwart lumberjacks, the people that owned and ran the lumber mills, their neighbors, and the other strong-hearted citizens of the area, and she describes them in her novel in vivid details. Her story follows the life of a man named Forrest Mann as he becomes part of the community and includes danger, deceit, intrigue, romance, and love. The characters are believable and become like friends as the story unfolds. The local landmarks are real: the town Agache is Glen Arbor on the shores of Lake Michigan; Muskrat Lake is Glen Lake; the narrows bridge and the sand dunes. The language and terms are of that period, with a few tweaks.
