Abstract Lung cancer is a major global health problem. Several strategies are required to conquer this cancer. Stricter implementations of tobacco control measures are necessary. Early detection programs should be implemented to decrease lung cancer mortality. Although chemotherapy remains a cornerstone of treatment, targeted therapies and immune checkpoint inhibitors improved treatment of metastatic cancers and are hoped to improve outcome of adjuvant and induction therapies. Novel immunotherapy approaches hold great promise. Better understanding of the molecular biology of lung cancer should lead to rational drug design.

Introduction

Lung cancer is a global health problem. Approximately 2.1 million individuals are diagnosed with lung cancer and 1.8 million die from this cancer each year.<sup>1</sup> Lung cancer rates continue to increase on the global level, although the rates are declining among males in some Western countries. Non-small cell lung cancer (NSCLC) makes up about 85% and small cell lung cancer (SCLC) about 15% of lung cancers. Pathological diagnosis is based on histology, immune histology and molecular analysis.<sup>2</sup> Lung cancers are currently staged according to the eighth edition of the TNM Classification for Lung Cancer.<sup>3,4</sup> Tumor stage is important for prognosis and treatment.<sup>3,4</sup> Overall, the five year survival rates are 15–20%. Among patients with NSCLC, these rates reach 90% for stage 1A1 but drop below 10% for stage 4. Among patients with SCLC, the rates are about 30% for limited disease and below 10% for extensive disease.

Treatment of patients with lung cancer requires multidisciplinary co-operation and is based on surgery, radiotherapy, systemic treatments (chemotherapy, targeted therapies, immune checkpoint inhibitors) and supportive care including end-of-life care. Treatment depends on tumor characteristics, tumor stage and patient-related factors. Finally, access to and re-imbursment of novel drugs are becoming an increasing challenge for many countries.

Major diagnostic and therapeutic advances have occurred during the last three decades. Here, the current status of systemic treatment and strategies for conquering lung cancer are described.
