Neuroendocrine dysfunction may be partly partly a result of exposure to pollutants, resulting in decreased frequency of sperm formation. Neuroendocrine dysfunction may be compensated or masked as a result of a second, adverse or protective agent. For example, neuroendocrine dysfunction may be masked by neuroendocrine dysfunction, which is not a result of exposure to pollutants, but a result of a second, adverse or protective agent.

22 Synonymy: change in the form, nature and support of the business activity. Involvement of the firm and its partners in the operations. This should imply a complete restructuring of the business activities, of all business strategies. Through strategic change, the firm changes its nature, its business, its management, its structure and its support system. The word 'other' (synonym) refers to changes in strategy, management and financial structure of the business unit.
