Globalisation, Global Justice and Social Work Iain Ferguson, Michael Lavalette, Elizabeth Whitmore, 2005. Globalization has become a seemingly unstoppable force over recent decades and in its wake global notions of social justice have developed in response to its negative aspects. Neo-liberal economic policies have been a key element in the wider process of globalization and these policies have had a profound impact on welfare provision and the shape of social work practice. Arising dissatisfaction among users of welfare and social work services is fuelling the search for a new, more radical social work that is firmly rooted in principles of social justice. Globalisation, Global Justice and Social Work explores the global effects of neo-liberal policies on welfare services in different countries with contributions from social work academics, practitioners and welfare activists around the world. The first section of the book presents case studies of impact of neo-liberalism on welfare systems, social service provision and the practice of social work. In the second section the chapters explore the relationship between social work practice and the struggle for social justice. Authors discuss the personal and political dilemmas they have had to address in seeking to link a personal commitment to social justice with their daily practice as workers and educators in social work. The final section assesses the prospects for social work practice based on notions of social justice by looking at what can be learned from the experience of previous radical movements as well as from emergent global and local movements.

Understanding Community Librarianship Alistair Black, David Muddiman, 2017-09-29. In the information society is the community-focused library a real possibility? This book reappraises the relationship between the library and its communities through an examination of the rise and decline of community librarianship over the last three decades. The authors consider key models of community-based library service and argue that bland assertions of community prevalence mask a complex and problematic relationship between a highly traditional public service bureaucracy and its users. The resulting uncertainty of purpose they claim explains much of the current crisis of the public library movement. Drawing on recent social science theory and empirical work in the field, this book offers a new and critical perspective on the current public library debate. It is essential reading for librarians, students of information and library science and all who have a stake in the future of the public library. As a case study of community public service and the local state it should also be of value to those with an interest in community development cultural policy and local government

An Age of Equipoise? Reassessing mid-Victorian Britain Martin Hewitt, 2017-07-05 The Age of Equipoise by W L Burn was published in 1964 and became a central text in the canon of interpretations of the Victorian period The book subsequently fell out of favour but recent claims to establish a new interpretative standard have paradoxically prompted reviewers to cast back to Burn s work as the orthodox standard against which such claims should be judged The essays in this volume by British and American contributors all engage to varying degrees with the notion of equipoise and how it can help to illuminate the mid Victorian period in ways which alternative formulations cannot Some of the chapters develop arguments embedded in Burn s own book others take up issues largely absent in The Age of Equipoise such as the position of children Britain s interaction with the wider world and the threats the period experienced to its concept of masculine identity Together the essays demonstrate the intricacy and turbulence of the forces of cohesion in Victorian society along with the success of that culture in achieving a working if shifting modus vivendi Moreover they substantiate the argument that whatever the limitations of Burn s work equipoise deserves rehabilitation as a powerful conceptual framework for making sense of mid Victorian Britain About the Editor Martin Hewitt is Director of the Leeds Centre for Victorian Studies and editor of the Journal of Victorian Culture With Robert Poole he has recently produced an edition of The Diaries of Samuel Bamford 1858 61 Sutton 2000

Native to the Republic Minayo Nasiali, 2016-10-20 In Native to the Republic Minayo Nasiali traces the process through which expectations about living standards and decent housing came to be understood as social rights in late twentieth century France These ideas evolved through everyday negotiations between ordinary people municipal authorities central state bureaucrats elected officials and social scientists in postwar Marseille Nasiali shows how these local level interactions fundamentally informed evolving ideas about French citizenship and the built environment namely that the institutionalization of social citizenship also created new spaces for exclusion Although everyone deserved social rights some were supposedly more deserving than others From the 1940s through the early 1990s metropolitan discussions about the potential for town planning to transform everyday life were shaped by colonial and later postcolonial migration within the changing empire As a port and the historical gateway to and from the colonies Marseille s interrelated projects to develop welfare institutions and manage urban space make it a particularly significant site for exploring this uneven process Neighborhood debates about the meaning and goals of modernization contributed to normative understandings about which residents deserved access to expanding social rights Nasiali argues that assumptions about racial social and spatial differences profoundly structured a differential system of housing in postwar France Native to the Republic highlights the value of new approaches to studying empire membership in the nation and the welfare state by showing how social citizenship was not simply constituted within imagined communities but also through practices involving the contestation of spaces and the enjoyment of rights
