Input Trade and Production Networks in East Asia Daisuke Hiratsuka, Yoko Uchida, 2010-01-01 Spatial fragmentation of production is linked with two great waves of unbundling The first one was a century and a half ago when the spatial location of production of goods was separated from their consumption We live in the age of a second unbundling where certain operations within the same factory can be fragmented and performed elsewhere There is trade in certain tasks and components which was made possible by cheaper and better communication and transport This book considers production networks in East Asia which is and will continue to be the most dynamic economic region in the decades to come Miroslav N Jovanovi University of Geneva Switzerland

Intermediate input trade is regarded as an important contributory factor in explaining the increase in world trade in recent years This timely book presents for the first time meticulous empirical analyses of the growth of input trade and includes detailed studies that capture the main features and characteristics of production networks in East Asia Intermediate input trade has grown markedly in East Asia and at a much faster rate than in the rest of the world Since the early 1990s when technological developments made it possible to separate the production process into many stages East Asia as a region has developed sophisticated production networks in the manufacture of various products Different countries have installed production stages according to their levels of technology or factor endowments and consequently sequential production stages are now located across various countries In order to produce final goods East Asian nations have therefore relied on the trade of inputs back and forth Containing unique and important data this book will appeal to academics researchers and policymakers interested in trade economic integration and Asian studies

Reinventing the World Bank Jonathan R. Pincus, Jeffrey A. Winters, 2018-08-06 Largely ignored for decades the World Bank increasingly finds itself at the center of an international political maelstrom Attacked by the Right as the last bastion of socialism and by the Left as an instrument of economic imperialism the Bank has struggled to adapt to a changing post Cold War era Still the world's leading development institution in terms of size and influence the International Bank for Reconstruction and Development's failure to articulate and implement a convincing strategy to reduce world poverty has left it vulnerable to the charge that at least in its present form it has outlived its usefulness In a book neither funded nor controlled by its subject leading North American and British scholars critically examine the World Bank They contend that an institution that has grown to unmanageable proportions through internally driven change cannot realistically be expected to effect its own reform program All the Bank's previous attempts at self redesign have failed and the contributors argue it is beyond reform it must be reinvented Reinvention involves a thoroughgoing and externally controlled process of transformation starting from basic principles and encompassing three closely related dimensions operations or the fit between the Bank's lending program and its development objectives concepts its vision of development and anti poverty strategy and power which includes the Bank's relationships with member countries and the wider public as well as structures of internal governance and accountability
