The Evolution of Pension Systems in Eastern Europe and Central Asia David C. Lindeman, Michal Rutkowski, Oleksiy Sluchynskyy, 2000-01-01 Since the early 1990s the transition economy countries of Eastern Europe and Central Asia have had to adapt their pension systems in minor and often very major ways Some of the changes relate to shrinking contribution bases and the inability of government s to finance prior commitments while still having to protect the pensioned populations from poverty Other changes however reflect the need to make pension systems more sustainable in light of forthcoming demographic changes The reforms entail a move away from a single pillar pay as you go defined benefit systems toward multi pillar systems that include a funded defined contribution component and change that convert remaining pay as you go components into ones that are more self sustaining and transparent The paper describes ongoing developments assesses the effects of current and forthcoming challenges in light of potential labor market changes and examines choices for a new pensions system with respect to the organization administration guarantees transition arrangements participation requirements role of the government annuitization and other factors The paper concludes that though a one size fits all approach is clearly not appropriate some practices emerging from the experiences in this region and elsewhere may offer useful guidance to others as they undertake deeper pension reforms
