Masons, Tricksters and Cartographers David Turnbull, 2003-09-02 In an eclectic and highly original study Turnbull brings together traditions as diverse as cathedral building Micronesian navigation cartography and turbulence research He argues that all our differing ways of producing knowledge including science are messy spatial and local Every culture has its own ways of assembling local knowledge thereby creating space through the linking of people practices and places The spaces we inhabit and assemblages we work with are not as homogenous and coherent as our modernist perspectives have led us to believe rather they are complex and heterogeneous motleys

Security and Climate Change Mark Lacy,2012-09-10 This new book explains why the international community has responded with a sense of fatalistic passivity to climate change It presents a distinct critique of realism through the study of this topic commonly overlooked in international relations The author argues that the realist view rests on a dangerous contradiction far from delivering security it serves to limit the way we think about the new generation of risks we face The book also provides a detailed case study evaluating US climate politics under the Clinton and Bush administrations

Modernity Gert Spaargaren,Arthur P J Mol,Frederick H Buttel,2000-06-02 This accomplished book argues that we can only make sense of environmental issues if we consider them as part of a more encompassing process of social transformation It asks whether there is an emerging consensus between social scientists on the central issues in the debate on environmental change and if concerns about the environment constitute a major prop to the process of globalization The book provides a thorough discussion of the central themes in environmental sociology identifying two traditions ecological modernization theory and risk society theory Biological Economies Richard Le Heron,Hugh Campbell,Nick Lewis,Michael

development and wider examinations of the rural dimension in economic geography and rural sociology have been confronted by three challenges These can be summarized as more than human approaches to economic life a post structural political economy of food and agriculture and calls for more enactive performative research approaches This volume describes the genealogy of such approaches drawing on the reflective insights of more than five years of international engagement and research It demonstrates the kinds of new work being generated under these approaches and provides a means for exploring how they should be all understood as part of the same broader need to review theory and methods in the study of food agriculture rural development and economic geography This radical collective approach is elaborated as the Biological Economies approach The authors break out from traditional categories of analysis reconceptualising materialities and reframing economic assemblages as biological economies based on the notion of all research being enactive or performative

Rationality and the Environment Bo Elling, 2012 Environmental assessment and management involve the production of scientific knowledge and its use in decision making processes The result is that within these essentially rational political assessment frameworks experts are creating and applying scientific knowledge for decision and management purposes that actually have strong ethical and aesthetic dimensions Yet these rational political frameworks lack the tools to provide guidance on ethical and aesthetic issues that affect the wider public This revolutionary work argues that ethical and aesthetic dimensions can only be brought into environmental politics and policies by citizens actively taking a stand on the specific matters in question The author draws on Habermas trisection of rationality as cognitive instrumental moral practical and aesthetic expressive to suggest that truly effective environmental policy needs to activate all three approaches and not favour only the rational To achieve this objective the author argues that public participation in environmental policy and assessment is necessary to counteract the dictatorship of technical and economic instrumentality in environmental policy the failure to take ethical and aesthetic rationalities into account and more importantly how such policy is applied on the ground to shape our natural and material world

Urban Infrastructure in Transition Timothy Moss, Simon Marvin, 2016-05-13 Achieving sustainable energy and resource use is vital if cities are to thrive or even function in the long term Focusing on cities in the United Kingdom Germany and Denmark this book examines the mounting pressures for changes in the management style of utility services in Europe pressures that stem from a wide range of sources such as liberalization and privatization of markets tighter environmental standards new economic incentives competing technologies and changing consumption patterns The authors show how changes in the management of utility services can contribute to achieving greater sustainability in urban regions Whilst more efficient technology has a part to play truly significant improvements in quality of life will be delivered only when the flow of material and energy through cities is focused on the goal of sustainability in each local context
